PREFACE.

THE first edition of the metrical Martyrology called in Irish Féilire Óengusso Céli Dé was published in 1880, by the Royal Irish Academy, in parallel columns, from four corrupt and uncorrected texts, hereinafter denoted by R¹, R², L, and LB. In the preface I maintained, for reasons which then seemed to me conclusive, that the poem could not have been composed much before the end of the tenth century. Further study, and the arguments of Professors Strachan¹ and Thurneysen,² have convinced me that I was wrong,³ and that its composition may, in accordance with the Irish tradition, be safely ascribed to the year 800 or thereabouts. An Irish metrical martyrology of such antiquity deserves the attention of all who are interested in religious history, liturgical books, Celtic philology, or poetic art; and the Council of the Henry Bradshaw Society is surely justified in trying to give to the members a critical text of this singular poem, with various readings from the ten MSS. in which it is wholly or partially preserved.

In forming the text, as well as in making the translation and glossary, I have used to the best of my power the discoveries in Old-Irish grammar and etymology achieved during the last twelve years by Ascoli, Windisch, Thurneysen, Zimmer, Zupitza, Osthoff, Sommer, Rozwadowski, Pedersen, Sarauw, Strachan and Lidén. I am far from regarding the present edition as definitive. I know too well that I have not realised my ideal; but, remembering the story told of Thorwaldsen in his old age,⁴ I cannot say that I am therefore despondent.

² ZCP. i. 345.

⁴ "A friend found him disconsolate before a finished statue, and inquired if he was despondent because he had not been able to realize his ideal. And the sculptor responded that, on the contrary, he had realized his ideal, and therefore he was downcast; for the first time his hand had been able to accomplish all that his mind had planned."—North American Review, June 15, 1905, p. 873.

I now propose, first, to describe the ten MSS. on which the present edition is founded; secondly, to notice the author of the Martyrology, Oengus the Culdee; thirdly, to consider some of the characteristics of the language of the poem, especially as bearing on the date of its composition; fourthly, to explain the metre in which it is written; fifthly, to give some account of its contents; and lastly, to notice the passages in the Irish prefaces and scholia which seem to throw light on early Irish religious practices, superstitions, folk-lore and legal antiquities.

I. DESCRIPTION OF THE MANUSCRIPTS.

The MSS. on which the present edition is founded will be respectively denoted by the following signs, here arranged in alphabetical order: B, C, E, F, H, L, LB, P, R¹, R².

B = Brussels MS. 5100-4.

As this codex has been fully described in the preface to the Martyrology of Gorman, London, 1895, it will be enough here to say that it is a small paper manuscript in the Royal Library, Brussels, almost wholly in the handwriting of Michael O'Clery, one of the Four Masters, who died about 1644. The copy of the Martyrology of Oengus which it contains is in Michael's handwriting, and was transcribed from a book written by Siocrach Ua Maelconaire in the year 1533. It begins on f. 94a, and ends on f. 119b. It omits ll. 393-396, ll. 543-546 of the epilogue and the first two lines of the quatrain for Oct. 8: the latter omission is supplied in the margin by a recent hand. All its important readings are, in the present work, marked B, and are given in the footnotes.

It seems to me on the whole to come closer to the copy in Lebar Brecc¹ than to those in the other MSS. But there are often variances, some, such as, in the prologue, rith roreith 28, n-oidhidh 49, riaghaidh 52, gerat 90, a dun 130, ro sretha 138, bertair 175, dílsiu 185, as nesa 217, slebe 240, -guidiu 265, sluinnfid 300, trib 328—decidedly better than the readings of the Speckled Book. So at Jan. 18 B has tasc while LB has bás: at Feb. 6, B has Mel while LB has Moel. See also Feb. 15 (i feil Beraig badhaig): Feb. 28, Ap. 30 (forcennat): June 15 (mórgail): July 10 (carcar): 15 (cach n-arim): Aug. 3 (noeibi): 5 (comarc): 7 (coecdaib): 19 (raighe):

Sep. 11 (imblíuch) : Nov. 3 (lith cain Corcunutan), 7 (fofuair), 22 (immartrai) : Dec. 26 (atneocham), Ep. 32 (riga) 226 (ronnain). Readings which deserve consideration, though they have not been adopted in the text, are Ep. 43 (i conair Crist credail), 70 (thair tiar), 129 (roat from ro-fot), 175 (ána).

C= The Cheltenham MS.

This is a parchment MS. now containing 48 pages. It formerly belonged to the lexicographer Edward O'Reilly, by whom it was sold to the late Sir Thomas Phillips. When I examined the manuscript, it was in the library of the Rev. John E. A. Fenwick, Thirlstane House, Cheltenham. The extravagant date, "as old as the tenth century," which Dr. Petrie (On the History and Antiquities of Tara Hill, p. 71) ascribed to this codex, was probably due to the vendor's ignorance or cupidity. Palæography, grammar, and spelling show that it can hardly be older than the fifteenth. As it is now unknown to Celtists, the following brief list of its contents may be welcome :—

- P. 1. Illegible.
- P. 2. Begins : et ní derna failti friu etc., a passage relating to the creation of Eve from Adam's seventh rib.
- P. 3. Poem beginning :
Athair caich, coimsid nime . in rí uasal ainglige, 'father of every one, ruler of heaven, the noble, angelic king,' and ending (p. 4) : rucad Gaoidel ar n-at[h]air, 'Góidel, our (eponymous) father, was born.'¹
- P. 4. Ro aitrehp tra Nell mac Feniusa Fairsaid theas i n-Eigipt.
- P. 5. Imtusa cloinde Danaine et cloinne Deirgthinedh et cloinde Luighdech meic Ithe, 'Adventures of the Children of Danann and the Children of Dergthene and the Children of Lugaid, son of Ith.'
- P. 9. Imtussa Mog[a]Nuadat. 'Adventures of Mugh Nuadat.'
- P. 12. A scribe's note beginning : Misse in Dubaltach mac Semuis do graiph in beag sin, etc. 'I am Dubaltach, son of James, who wrote that little bit.'
- P. 13. Story beginning with a description of a combat between the King of Erin and the King of Ulaid.
- Pps. 20-45 contain an imperfect copy of the Martyrology of Oengus. Lacking are the lines from the quatrain for March 13 to the second line of the quatrain for Nov. 21 ; and p. 19, which probably contained a prose preface, is now illegible.
- P. 20. IMrordus in rigraíd, Prol. 21.

¹ Also in the Book of Lecan, fo. 267 (Plummer).

- P. 22. Sén a Crist. Beginning of the invocation prefixed to the prologue.
- P. 24. Re sil dálach dained, first line of the quatrain for Jan. 1.
- P. 27. Morait kl. Febrai, first line of the quatrain for Feb. 1. The poem continues to the end of the quatrain for March 12. There is then a lacuna down to p. 35, which begins with mac Comain a hAraind, the third line of the quatrain for Nov. 21.
- P. 36. Sluind Decimbir kalaind, Dec. 1.
- Pp. 41-45. On kaland cu araile etc. The epilogue.
- P. 45. Tri gairi in domain, 'the three cries of the world.' See Lism. Lives xxxi., where they are said to be the cry of the Israelites when they entered the Red Sea; the cry of Hell when Christ carried off his prey from it; and the cry of Doomsday when the righteous separate from the sinners. See also Egerton 1782, fo. 49^b, cited in Celt. Zeits. iv. 237.
- " Poem ascribed to Comghall of Bennchor, beginning : M'aonuran imm aruclan gan duine imm¹ gnais : 'I am alone in my little oratory, without anyone in my company.'²
- P. 46. De uerbis Colmain macoBeonæ³.i. de uituis⁴ latentibus in umbra bonorum operum, etc., see Mart. Gorm. viii. For this Colmán's Apgitir Crábaid 'Alphabet of Devotion,' see ZCP. i. 496; III. 447.
- l. 25. Dán ecnai⁵ dogni rig do pauper, dogni coairt di eissirt, dogni gaoth do baoth. 'The gift of knowledge makes a king of a pauper, a landholder of a landless man, a sage of a fool.'
- l. 28. Legend of saints Secundinus and Patrick beginning, Feacht n-aile luidh Seachnall do Ardnachæ, 7 ní raibi Patric hifus, conaccai dá ech carpuit etc. 'Once upon a time Sechnall went to Armagh, and Patrick was not there and he saw two chariot-horses,' etc.
- P. 46a, l. 44. Tabradh nech dá uidh re n-aithnedaib Dé do dibirt cinnus déchfus ina deccraib ar Dia, 7 cindus guidhfas in Cuimdhe cumachtach inn airc no a n-éiccin, 7 cindus dochlúinfí Dia a donuall nó a dibregóit. 'Let every one take heed before deserting God's commandments how in his hardships he will look for God, and how in want or in need he will pray to the mighty Lord, and how God will hear his piteous cry or his fervent prayer.'

All the various readings of this fragment, which seem of the slightest importance, are given in the footnotes marked C. Very rarely are they of use in establishing the text. We may, however, cite n-aidid Prol. 49, riagaib, 52, ni feasa 76, ngerat 90, laa teglach, 95, noebainm 109, in-airiniuch phene 118, a mur cluime 126, icthair 226, cobair 243, -guidiu 265, cicut 280, docoimnactar Jan. 4, Gluceri Jan. 14, ro-s-feser Feb. 2, gerat Feb. 5, non-ale Feb. 7, i feil Beraig bagaig Feb. 15, damair Feb. 19, retglaind March 3, Bríg Nov. 25, -trecheng Nov. 28, faide Nov. 29, Merōbus Dec. 4, Buaid n-Ichtbrichtain Dec. 8 (where R¹ has hichtbrichtain, L ichtbrichtain, LB ichtbrictain), darralad Dec. 8. Morgrian inna clandsa Dec. 18, nad labræ Dec. 22, Lanbendacht ind rig-so Ep. 61, cithar 104, salmaib, marbaib 190, 192, aslaige 198, ardalegfa 216.

The long vowels are sometimes marked. Here and there, too, there is a valuable gloss, e.g. immidchuairt Ep. 94, i. i medoncuairt, which proves the error of the rendering of Tech Midchuarda by 'mead-circling house,' in O'Curry's Manners and Customs, III. 600.

Needless to cite many of the Middle-Irish corruptions such as lithdath Prol. 19, ritroith 28, morrighu 61, riglad for rígrad 278, dained for dóine Jan. 1.

The note at the end (infra p. 288) as to the number of quatrains in the Martyrology is more accurately given infra, p. xvii, from LB. 105 marg. sup.

E = Egerton 88.

Egerton 88, hereinafter denoted by E, is a small-folio parchment MS. in the British Museum, written by Domnall O Duibhdá-bhoirenn and his pupils in the latter half of the sixteenth century. Its contents are catalogued in the introduction to Three Irish Glossaries, London, 1862, pp. lix-lxii, and much more elaborately in S. H. O'Grady's Catalogue of Irish MSS. (in the British Museum), pp. 85-141. The portion containing parts of our Martyrology is the so-called O'Davoren's Glossary, (ff. 80^a-93^a), which has been twice edited, first, in Three Irish Glossaries above mentioned, and secondly, in the Archiv für Celtische Lexicographie II. 198-504. A paper copy of this glossary (unfortunately imperfect), by Dudley MacFirbís, is preserved in H. 2. 15 (a MS. in the library of Trinity College, Dublin) and is here cited as MacF.

The various readings of the fragments of the Martyrology contained in O'Davoren's Glossary are as a rule not important; but there are some worth citing, such as ciabtur, Prol. 74, o luid 128, ciatcois 182, ciarbo ligdha 214, menann 285, dodonfairci Jan. 26, Ain Jan. 29, armuinnter Sep. 2, atroeris Dec. 16, a lere Dec. 20, decmaic Ep. 172, ciabdar baile a mbresa, 'though mighty were their battles,' Prol. 75, which may be the true reading. We may also cite Domrairbera Ep. 65, ro drebraing Aug. 26, and cachain Dec. 8.

F = The Franciscan MS.

This is a beautifully-written parchment MS. in small folio, formerly at Louvain, where it was used by Father John Colgan, author of the Acta Sanctorum Hiberniae, Lovanii, 1645, afterwards in the Irish monastery in Rome, and now in the Franciscan monastery, Merchants' Quay, Dublin. It contains ninety-nine pages in double columns. Long vowels are rarely marked; but infected g, d, b are often furnished with the sign of aspiration. The scribe's note at the end of the epilogue is obscure, but seems to run as follows:—

Finit amen finit. Misi Ruaidhri hua Luinin i. mac Mata maic S...h. Luinin do sgrib in feilire si do mac Magnusa (?) Meguidir i. do Chathal occ, mac Cathail maic Gillai Patraic i. do biatach in tseñaigh.

Hence the MS. appears to have been written by Ruaidri O'Luinin for Cathal Maguire, a canon of Armagh and Dean of Clogher, who died in 1470¹, and is here styled the 'victualler of the synod.'

F yields some good readings, e.g., andorogbus Prol. 18, a ngrethaे 154, bertair 175, Noois 184, tathunn 217, thuirter 230, doine 340, estecht Jan. 8, 19, nad cumscraigset Feb. 6, retglaind March 3, airdirc March 21, feil in tSincill 26, Pollionis, rindnim May 29, dodafarnaic June 10, Oendruim 23, Albbae 25, noib Aug. 12, dorime Sep. 5, arsil 29, frem Oc. 10, coair 26, rerta Dec. 20 (leg. rerthae), atnecham Dec. 26, fomruirmius Ep. 38. But it has some exceedingly bad ones, e.g. righaib, Prol. 52, sluinnfet 320, rochaemhnacar Jan. 4, snaithsium Jan. 30, Pauli Feb. 19, cinn indis 27, crich 28, lighaib March 30, bladach Ap. 7, Epectini May 23, toirm July 7, Aplenoir 22, Lumbus 29, concatail Aug. 8, Agatha 30, sotbotha Nov. 15, diruirmisem Ep. 6, riagail 32, rorach 129, roguide 364, coisced 393, firt 534, promsat, lobsat, Ep. 219, 220.

F is heavily glossed, and contains numerous scholia, most of which agree in substance with those in the other MSS., while others, added with the formula 'in hoc die' at the end of the notes on each day, give the names of certain saints omitted by Oengus.² Hence this copy is called by Colgan Aengusius auctus, and it seems to have been freely used by the compilers of the Martyrology of Donegal.

H = H. 3. 18.

This is a collection of MSS. in the library of Trinity College Dublin, where it is (or was lately) marked H. 3. 18. These manuscripts are of various dates and sizes, and are now divided into two parts, part I. containing pp. 1–457, part II. containing pp. 458–875. It formerly belonged to Edward Lhuyd, the author of the Archaeologia Britannica, Oxford, 1707: the paging numbers are in his handwriting; and two Welsh notes by him, in pp. 459 and 585, record the dates of his purchase of parts of the collection. The following pages of H are occupied either with glosses or glossed extracts:—

P. 51^b. A slip containing unprinted glosses.

Pp. 61–83. These glosses are printed in the Transactions of the Philological Society for 1859, pp. 168–215.

Pp. 245–260. Law-glosses, not printed.

Pp. 284–289, 415, 416, 466–468. Miscellaneous glosses, not printed.

Pp. 520–528. Glossed extracts from the Tripartite Life of S. Patrick, printed in Archiv für Celtische Lexicographie, III., 8–32, and p. 56.

Pp. 533–539. Unprinted glosses.

Pp. 603–616. Glosses on Cophur in dá Muccida (printed in Ir. Texte III. 276), etc.

Pp. 616–622. Glossed extracts from the Martyrology of Oengus; printed in Three Irish Glossaries, pp. 124–140.

Pp. 623–628, 633–640, 649–654, 661, 663, and lastly, 666–668.

The number of quatrains cited in H is 112. Long vowels are seldom marked: infected g, d, b have the sign of aspiration.

The most remarkable readings in H are:—hi for a(n), Prol. 75, ngerat 90, arrochiniir 127, na ba 294, balcdú Jan. 4, chéais Jan. 17, dodonfairci Jan. 26, scél a annaigh Feb. 16, nit mórdai March 1, Moissi March 1, adfet March 23, doreith Ap. 16, drebhraing Ap. 17, canaid Ap. 26, uaitne Ap. 29, Ciar Urbain it glana, May 19, a toebain it gela May 19, clar ngelda, nad char June 22, Eutaic July 2, doforcat July 15, feil Darbileadh bainí Aug. 3, Saxsan Aug. 5, roleir Aug. 26, asrort Oc. 7, ocrighan Oc. 13, lagin (?) Luais Oc. 18, gabais Oc. 29, noaib in domain dalaigh ('the saints of the multitudinous world') Nov. 1, donarlaidh Nov. 8 (donarlaid R¹, LB.) ; tuathmaigh lethain Dec. 11, rofersam i. doronsam, Ep. 2, ceptar 14, ndirmand 143, dubart 153, In rigraidh doruirmes 229.

L = Laud 610.

This is a double-columned parchment folio in the Bodleian. It contains 146 leaves, and was transcribed in 1453 from the Saltair Caisil and three other old MSS. by Seaan Buidhe O'Cléirigh and others for Edmund Butler mac Richard, then chief of one of the septs of the Butlers. The copy of the Martyrology preserved in it begins on fo. 59, and ends on the recto of fo. 75. There is a bad facsimile of the first quatrain of the prologue in O'Conor's Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores veteres, tom. I. Prolegomena, opposite p. clxxiv: there is a photolithograph of a page of genealogies in the National MSS. of Ireland, Part III, Plate XLVII.; and the heterogeneous contents of the codex are described by Dr. Todd (Progs. R.I. Academy II. 336) and Dr. O'Donovan (Book of Rights, Dublin, 1847, pp. xxviii–xxxiii). The date (1453) and one of the scribes' names are thus mentioned in the colophon to the fragment of Cormac's Glossary contained in ff. 79^a–86^a:

'This is the year of the Lord when this little glossary of the Psalter [of Cashel] has been written, to wit, a thousand years and four hundred years, and thirteen years, and two score, the fifth day of the month of February and the eighth day of the moon. I am Yellow John O'Clery who wrote, and for Edmund Butler mac Richard this little glossary of Cormac's Psalter hath been written.'

The history of the MS. is continued by the following entry on the lower margin of fo. 110^b :—

'This Psalter (was) the Psalter of Mac Richard Butler, to wit, Edmund Butler, until the defeat at Baile in Phoill¹ was inflicted on the Earl of Ormond and on Mac Richard by the Earl of Desmond,² to wit, Thomas. And this book and the Book of the Rock were taken in ransom for Mac Richard; and it is that Mac Richard who caused these books to be written for himself, (and kept them) until Thomas Earl of Desmond wrested them away.'

"Thus," says Dr. Todd (Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy, Dublin, 1841, p. 338), "it appears that this book and the book of Carrick (now unknown), were in the fifteenth century considered as a sufficient ransom for the person of a great chieftain—a remarkable proof of the preservation of a love of literature amongst the native Irish nobles in the midst of all their war and faction at that period."

² The eighth Earl, who was beheaded at Drogheda in 1467. He was according to the O'Clerys, 'learned in Latin, English, and ancient Irish writings.'

The following corruptions in the prologue were probably due to a fifteenth century scribe:—

Prol. 28, ra reith; 87, fororcnaid; 38, ro tinmit; 47, sonnad; 50, forthren; 52, 330, rig; 54, na sluaig; 57, rodan ort-sam; 67, arrochur; 80, membraid; 91, dorossa; 143, diafromam; 186, madaronaib; 194, mairit; 201, decais; 231, bithtrogaid; 241, dochingecht; 247, atuelat; 262, dilse; 315, nondlomaim; 336, fili. The blunders membraid, Prol. 80, and ma daronaib, Prol. 186, seem to show that the scribe here copied from a MS. in which b and d were nearly alike.

So in the body of the poem and in the epilogue, we have Middle-Irish corruptions in snadug Jan. 21 (O. Ir. snádud), rofotad May 27 (O. Ir. dorortad), da primfeil May 31, rosdail July 15, arslaig Sep. 29, adorthair Nov. 23, rusfuc Dec. 14, biam Ep. 165, ro herais Ep. 474.

On the other hand in andorogbus, Prol. 18; imrordus, 20; biasta, 41; ro uctha, 45; morríg, 61; dorogra, 112; ro scáich, 121; isliu, 153; níptá, 185; tathund, 217; colléce, 239; fris'reith, 302; the scribe has preserved old and sound readings. So in estecht Jan. 19, 22, damair Feb. 16, gene (gen. sg.) Feb. 26, forcennat Feb. 28, Ap. 30, di (leg. dí) March 3, ronn-ain Ap. 22, Oc. 29, Trifoniæ Oc. 18, lasn-ort Oc. 22, geguin Oc. 23, troethsus Nov. 16, geisi (leg. gessi) Dec. 2, dosruimdemar Ep. 6, dodigset 24, conidnaicert 105, doragat 115, nogessed 217, adodpart 269, atomididmæ 494. Note, too, the preservation of the distinction between the non-relative infix'd pronoun in fo-m-giuassis and the relative in fo-dom-gluassis, Ep. 376, 377.

LB = Lebar Brecc.

The Lebar Brecc, or 'Speckled Book,' a huge manuscript, now in the library of the Royal Irish Academy, was compiled in the fourteenth century by the Mac Egans of Dún Doighre, now Duniry, in the co. Galway. Some account of its contents (deformed by mistakes both in Latin and in Irish),¹ is prefixed to the lithographic facsimile published in 1876, and a brief but better catalogue is found in pp. 36–40 of Dr. Atkinson's Passions and Homilies, Dublin, 1887. The copy of the Martyrology which it contains begins at p. 75 of the facsimile, and ends at p. 106; and there is a photolithograph of the page containing the commencement of the prologue in the National MSS. of Ireland, Part III. No. xxviii. Long vowels are rarely marked, and infected g, d, b are never denoted. The Dominical letter and the day of the month (in the Roman notation) are written in the margin opposite the first line of each quatrain (see Prol. 305, 335), and in the upper margin of p. 105 is the following note as to the number of quatrains¹ in the Martyrology of Oengus:

A coic .lx. ar .ccc.aib hi curp in fhelire feisin ocus a se 7 oenfiche dec ina da brolaig, conid a hoen dec 7 cethri fichtit 7 .u.
cét insin uile .7rl.,

'Three hundred and sixty-five in the body of the Martyrology itself and six and eleven score (226) in the two prologues, so that all that is eleven and fourscore and five hundred ($365 + 226 = 591$).'

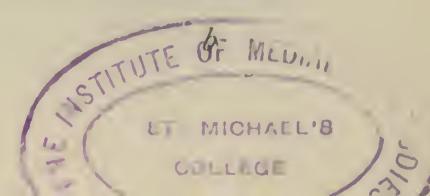

LB is enriched with copious glosses and scholia, which are printed in the first edition of this Martyrology; but though oldest in date, of all the MSS. it deviates most from the archetype. Thus in the prologue we find:

line 5, romberthar fordomberthar; 28, ritroich for ro ráith; 57 afirthuillem for ar firthuillem; 60, cenes marsium for cen aes muirsium: 61, Morrigu naengennti for Mórrig innna ngente; 90, gerait for gérat; 99, 109, noemainim; Næmainim for nóebainm; 130, andún for a dún; 135, nocon for nicon; 146, dianit for dia mbí (or dianid?); 156, na betha for na mbethae; 157, 161, hí taimne for hi táam; 164, ro pritcha for ro phraidchi; 176, ni treb-thair for ní trehtar; 188, ni bet for ní beth; 201, déchaid for déc-caid; 206, imaroraid for immaroerad; 210, co udessib is tririb for déssib ocus tririb; 217, Tathum for Táthunn; 228, icthar for icthair or iccthair; 230, 232, thrétha, gértha for thréta, gréta; 240, slebti for slébe; 243, combair for cobair; 251, Muire for Mairi; 271, robeosa for ro bithbeo; 282, cení clíinter for ce ro-clunter; 285, rimther for rímter; 297, for crindither for for crinniur; 300, sluinnfet for slcindfith; 302, frisraith for frís'reith.

Corruptions in the body of the poem are: duinlesce Jan. 3 (for Dúin Blésce): as runaid rindaig, 12, bás 18, etsecht 22, Cebriani 23, am 25, dodotfairci 26, gerait Feb. 5, Moel 6; don oig Juliani 16, aditcialla 23, forcendait 28: da retlaind, March 3: oengus itir flaithib 11, salualtur 14, aspal 17, da sinchell 26; ambifani Ap. 2, fiadait 6, canaid 25, forcendait 30, etsecht May 2, ind each 7, rotcarsat 8, propaci 13, noemdai 27, dia (for dí) 31, etan June 1, anglind 3, dotofarnaic 10, mer 13, natcar 22: -ostuirius 26, notnaile July 9, conrualaid 12, ateocham 14, airem 15, noll redlainne 29, noemgerait Aug. 4, cormac 5, la mochua 6, ind ecnac 11, sedbdai 31, la teor Sep. 1, atrendai 6, a n-imliuch 11, dis 14, ateocham 20, ard igerait 27, arslig 29, imradem Oc. 11, atatiam 26: la líth...corcnutan Nov. 3, fosfuair 7, fuilge 9, cotaromuir 11, ba 13, lexu 14: configbail Dec. 3, donarlaid 8, lisfe 9.

This is a small folio parchment MS. in the library of the Royal Irish Academy, now containing eleven leaves. The epilogue is in double columns. In the rest of the poem each quatrain runs, as a rule, in a single line across the page. The Martyrology is followed by a copy of the legend telling how Becán macc Cúla, St. Patrick's first convert, rescued Bresal's soul from hell (Lismore Lives, xxvii–xxviii). Then comes the colophon:—

ISsed is ais don Tigerna .i. secht mbliadna 7 tri .xx. G an liter domhnaigh 7 a hocht in nuimir óir. Uilliam mac an legha qui scribsit [ut] bona morte peribit.

Hence it appears that the MS. was written by William mac an legha³ ('the son of the leech') in the year 1467, the Dominical letter being G, and the golden number eight. Prose-preface and prologue are missing in this MS., and also the quatrains for the months of May, September and December. The glosses are interlinear; the scholia for the most part on the lower margins. Long vowels are often marked.

Characteristic of P is the tendency of the scribe to put ld for ll,—as in holdmuir Feb. 17, Teilde June 25, nold Aug. 8, celd Oct. 12 note,—and nd or nn for n,—as in ind-air Feb. 13, Seirnd March 15, ind amsir Ep. 116, cond-aile Feb. 18, cond huaige June 18, Conningin March 8, ind n-airnecht Aug. 3. He sometimes has oi for ai, as in coin March 13, Oct. 10, moinich Oct. 27 = cáin L. He writes d for t in Padraicc, Pedair, adsfed; d for g in blod: th for h in ingina thuage, June 5. Custatin (for Constantin) March 11, is noticeable. So are Faleran, Aug. 11, for Valeran, in for an 'their' July 17, ir-rúamson (for ar-riúamsom) Oc. 28, landlech (for landrech) July 28.

² He was the scribe of parts of an Irish MS. in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Rev. Celt. xi. 391, 395.

dodafarnaicc June 10, huainn June 13, Apollnair July 22: na retglannæ July 29, Agappa Aug. 30, molmæ Aug. 31, atasnia[i]m Oc. 26, crochthæ Oc. 31, cobraith Oc. 18, senaidh Nov. 30, No bágu Nov. 30, ligflatha Ep. 22, arpeti Ep. 79, conidnacert Ep. 105, delmainm Ep. 127, i mbuidnib Ep. 295.

The saints Abundius Aug. 26, and Dalbach Oc. 24, are mentioned only in P. In the former case the fifteenth-century scribe seems to have been influenced by the Roman Martyrology. The other MSS. have (I now think, rightly) Quinti, which accords with the Epternach copy of Mart. Hier.

R¹=Rawlinson B. 505.

R¹. This is a parchment MS. in folio of the beginning of the fifteenth century, preserved in the Bodleian, and marked Rawlinson B. 505. It contains 220 leaves. Its chief contents are an imperfect copy of Jocelin's life of S. Patrick and the Latin lives of thirty-eight other saints, one Welsh (S. David, fo. 196), the rest Irish.¹ The body of the Martyrology begins at fo. 211, and ends at fo. 220. There is a bad facsimile of part of the quatrain for Jan. 1 in O'Conor's Rer. Hib. Scriptores, vol. i. prolegg., part. 2, p. cxliv, tab. 6, no. 4. Though prose-preface, prologue, and epilogue are lacking, this copy is, so far as it goes, by far the best that has come down to us. Thus the names of foreign saints are generally given with exceptional correctness. For example:—

- Jan. 14. Gluceri (rectius Glyceri): Luceri LB. F.
- Jan. 22. Valerius: Valeus L. Varilius LB. Valarius E.
- Jan. 23. Severiani: Cebriani LB. Semuniani H.
- April 2. Amphiani: Ambiaine L. Ambifani LB.
- May 2. Saturnin: Saturni L. LB.
- May 12. Cyriacus: Ciriacus L. LB.
- May 13. Teraci Probique: Ciraci is Propi L. Teraci Propaci LB.
- May 23. Epechtiti (rectius Epicteti): Epectini L. LB. F.
- June 24. Iohain: Eoin H. P. Ioin L. LB.
- June 28. Fabiani: Faluiani L. Flauiani F. P. Flouiani LB. B.
- July 22. Apolnair: Appolloin LB.
- July 29. Lupus: Lumbus LB. F.
- July 26. Simplicc: Simplex LB. Semplix L.
- Aug. 20. Diascorus: Diarascorus L. LB.
- Aug. 25. Bartholom: Parrtalon L. Parrthalon LB.

- Oct. 2. Eleuther: Iuliter L. LB. F. Eliter P.
 Dec. 4. Merobus: Meropus L. Morepus LB.

So R¹ often excels other MSS. in preserving older grammatical forms. Take, for example, the following verbs:—

- Jan. 1. toided, where other MSS. have taidhet, toied.
 Jan. 4. decoemnagtar: docoemnacair L.
 Jan. 10. Almini: Ailme LB. Ailmne C.
 Jan. 12. as-runna-rinnaid: as-runaid-rindaig LB.
 Jan. 20. conuagu: conuaige LB. conduaige P.
 Feb. 23. adidngialla: anithgialla L, aritgialla F. aditcialiu LB.
 Feb. 28. forcennat: forcendait LB, forcengat F. forcennait H.

 Ap. 2. drebraing: dreblaing L.
 Ap. 17. drebraing: trebraing F. drebring P.
 Ap. 26. cachaind (leg. cachain): canait L. P. canaid LB.
 Ap. 27. Immacurtis: Imacurdis L. Himocuirtis LB. IMcuirtes P.
 Jun. 10. dodafarnaic: do donfairnic L, dotoftarnaic LB.
 Jun. 19. batir: batar L. P. LB. F.
 Sep. 8. Foraithmentar: Foraithinter L. Foraithmenar H.
 Sep. 29. arsil: arslaig L, arslig LB.
 Oc. 19. aschomart: ascomart P. L. LB.
 Nov. 22. raith: luid L. LB. F.
 Dec. 9. chlithi. clithe B. L. cleithe F. clithi LB.
 Dec. 29. donnecrai: donnecna L. dondecrai LB. dondedmai F.

A less admirable characteristic of R¹ is the fondness of its scribe for irrational vowels. Thus adabal June 26, aidbile March 26, Aperil March 27, carann March 10, Liberen March 11, respectively for adbul, aidble, April, crann, Libréen. He rarely marks long vowels, and never denotes infected g, d or b. He writes l for r in damail Feb. 16, and coclait Dec. 24, and r for l in creir Aug. 16, and tempuir Dec. 15.

Each quatrain in R¹ is, as a rule, contained in a single line extending across the page. The glosses are, as usual, interlinear: the scholia are for the most part put together at the end of each month. They are rarely in the margins or above the lines.

R² = Rawlinson B. 512.

R² is a parchment manuscript, also in the Bodleian, marked Rawlinson B. 512. It is a double-columned quarto containing ff. 154, and written by various hands in the fourteenth or fifteenth century. Ff. 5–30 contain the elder copy of the Tripartite Life of St. Patrick, and the other contents of the codex are catalogued in the introduction to the Rolls edition of that Life, pp. xiv–xlv. The prose preface to the Martyrology begins at fo. 59^a 1. The poem commences at fo. 53^b, but breaks off at line 60 of the prologue. At fo. 54^a begins the epilogue,¹ and it ends at fo. 56^b. This is followed by a quatrain in the rinnard metre, which, when correctly spelt, runs thus:—

Bendacht ríg do nélaib
ro génair ó Mairi
for anmain cen mire
Óengusso co íglaini.

‘The blessing of the King of Clouds, who has been born of Mary, on the soul without madness of Oengus the pure.’

The seven succeeding folios from 57^a to 64^a are filled with notes on the body of the Martyrology, which unfortunately is missing in this MS.

The scribe’s name was Dubthach Ua Duibgennan, as appears from the following notes, which are in the same handwriting:—

Fo. 64b. . . . annso do Geroid an Fáni mac Seoirsea dar’ sgribus an [rem]foculsa in Feliri 7 a r’airim Oengus do naemaib sund co mbet ag ar cabair araen. And Mary and the Saints of this book to leave us their ration of delight, for we have not found . . . reward . . . in Baile Atha Buidi. The spelling of this copy is often quite modern. Thus we

II. THE AUTHOR OF THE MARTYROLOGY.

Little that can fairly be called historical is known about the author of our Martyrology. The sources of the traditions concerning him are the Irish prefaces (of which two are printed and translated infra, pp. 2–14): the Book of Leinster, p. 370^c, where he is mentioned as one of the fraternity of Maelruain of Tallaght: the Martyrology of Tallaght, at March 11, where he is called a bishop, grandson of Oiblén; and the following poem in the Lebar Brecc, p. 106^b, which comes immediately after the epilogue to the Martyrology of Oengus:

1. Aibind suide sund amne · re taeb Eoire uarglaine,

¹ This and the preceding stanza, when separated from their context, Matthew Arnold mistook for an epitaph, and said of them, with kindly exaggeration, “a Greek epitaph could not show a finer perception of what constitutes propriety and felicity of style in compositions of this nature,” On the Study of Celtic Literature, London, 1867, p. 146.

Translation.

1. Delightful to sit here thus, by the side of the cold-pure Nore :
though it was troopful, there was not a path of raids in gifted Disert Bethech ('the Birchen Hermitage').
2. Disert Bethech wherein dwelt the man whom hosts of angels used to visit, a pious cloister behind a circle of crosses, wherein Oengus son of Oiblén used to be.
3. Oengus from the assembly of heaven, here are his tomb and his bed : and hence he went to death on a Friday unto holy heaven.
4. 'Tis in Cluain Eidnech he was reared : in Cluain Eidnech he was buried : in Cluain Eidnech of many crosses he studied his psalms at first.
5. Oengus in a prison of bondage, by the will of God's Son, in Tallaght : that was not vigorous life in the kiln a-drying (corn).
6. Before anyone arose in the country a hard sack he had, for grinding seeds : thrice fifty psalms,—clear fulfilment—three hundred genuflexions every night.
7. Greenish cornblades (grew) through the hair of his head, a covering of hair through his body: seven years for him—godly the fasting,—without music, without repose.
8. He drank no ale out of a cup, Oengus—choice was the wheat² :
often his face changed colour, between wind and winnowing chaff.
9. He went one day to cut wood, Oengus the flame on Bregia :
while lopping it—tale with beauty—he struck off his gospel-hand.³

² tuirnd seems an abridgment of tuirenn, here, as in the Martyrology, denoting God's wheat, i.e. a saint.

³ i.e., his right hand: cf. in ferand ar do láim šoscela, Charter vii. in Book of Kells. One may infer that he was left-handed.

10. Then the noble birds wailed sorrowfully : around the noble one, around the abbot, they cried a cry greater than any cry.

11. His (left) hand comes to his forearm, Oengus without semblance¹ of illegality—what miracle was mightier under heaven?—(there was) healing without defect, without blemish.

12. Let him pray for me with that (right) hand that neither evil nor hardship befall me : let him pray in unity of name, along with his namesake.²

13. The man who wove quatrains has come here, the sun of the west of the world,³ of Meath : a bank (whereon) the headache attacked him, a bank which is called the bank delightful.

Hence the kernel of fact in the traditional biography of Oengus may be shortly stated as follows:—He was son of Oengoba and a grandson of Oiblén. He was a contemporary of Aed Ordñigthe, overking of Ireland from the year 793 to 817, of Fothuth of the Canon (flor. 804), and of Connmach bishop of Armagh (ob. 806). He became a monk in the monastery of Clonenagh on the banks of the Nore in the Queen's county. He afterwards joined the fraternity of Tallaght near Dublin, then presided over by S. Maelruain, who died in 787, and whom Oengus commemorates at Aug. 11.⁴ Out of humility he concealed his name, orders and attainments,⁵ and was for some time employed in kiln-drying, grinding corn, and cutting wood. He began his Martyrology at Clonenagh, finished it in Tallaght, and showed it to Fothuth in 804. He afterwards became an abbot and a bishop, of course without a see. He died on a Friday, and was buried at Clonenagh. His obitual day is March 11; but the year of his death is unknown. It may have been 819, 824, or 830, in each of which years the eleventh of March fell on a Friday.⁶

³ cf. the gen. sg. Domnann in Indber Domnann, infra, p. 72, and Irrus Domnann.

⁴ Maelruain’s devotion to S. Michael (infra p. 12) seems evidenced by an addition, half-Latin, half-Irish, to a Hiberno-latin hymn to that archangel, printed by Mone, Hymni Latini Medii Aevi, 1853, i. 447–449, and now at Karlsruhe, viz. ‘benedicat De[us] te et Michael for Moilruain (‘says Moelruain’) amen,’ where for for Moilruain the MS. (in a Frankish hand of the eighth century) has for moilruām.

⁵ Similar stories are told of Fergil of Salzburg, Cronán and Disibod. See Olden, The Church of Ireland, pp. 103–105, and as to Cronán, Adamnán’s Vita Columbae, ed. Reeves, p. 87.

⁶ Lanigan, Ecclesiastical History of Ireland, III. 249.

Whether Oengus son of Oengoba was a culdee is a little doubtful. He certainly speaks of himself as bochtán ‘a pauper’ (Ep. 392), and in pauperán trúagsa ‘this wretched mendicant,’ (Ep. 408), which points to membership of a society bound by obligations of poverty. Moreover ‘the title,’ says Dr. Reeves, ‘by which he is invariably designated is that of Céle Dé’ But he is not so styled in the Irish prefaces to the Martyrologies of Oengus and Gorman. In the Book of Leinster 354^c 22 and the Lebar Brecc 23^a 34 (where two lines of the Martyrology of Oengus are cited), the author is simply called Oengus hua Oibleain, Aengus hua Oibleni. So in Rawlinson B. 512, fo. 94^a, he is called merely Oengus mac Oiblen. So in the title to the Brussels copy of the Martyrology of Tallaght: Incipit Martira Oenghuis maic Oiblein 7 Maelruain (h)ic. In the body of that martyrology he is called a bishop. In fact, down to the seventeenth century, when the Martyrology of Donegal was compiled, our Oengus is never described as a Céle Dé, for the ‘Oengus Celi-dé,’ to whom the Saltair na Rann—a poem of the end of the tenth century—is ascribed in a MS. of the twelfth—cannot possibly have been our Oengus grandson of Oiblén. Since the seventeenth century he has, no doubt, been called by Colgan,¹ Lanigan,² and others, a céle Dé or culdee. This perhaps is all that Dr. Reeves meant to say, and, in accordance with the current practice, Oengus is so styled in the title-page of the present work.

What, then, is a culdee? The earliest instances of the employment of the term céle Dé,³ literally ‘servus Dei’,⁴ are in the Vita S. Findani, and in the Milan gloss 30^c 3, where it has no ecclesiastical significance. In Middle-Irish MSS. it is applied to foreign monks,⁵ to religious Irishmen practising poverty,⁶ to the ascetic Indian Brahmins.⁷ Ultimately the plural céli Dé denoted a kind of secular canons, who occupied an intermediate position between the monks and the secular clergy.¹ They had a rule of their own,² regulating their food, drink, communions, confessions, sleeping, fasting, tonsuring, labour, etc.; their head was called cenn ‘chief,’ or prior ‘prior,’ not abb ‘abbot’: they were sometimes married; and at Armagh they looked after the sick,³ had charge of the repairs of the church, and helped in the service of the choir and altar.

² Ecclesiastical History of Ireland, III. 248. Lanigan calls céle Dé ‘a surname peculiar to himself’ (i.e. to Oengus hua Oiblén). He must have overlooked Comgan céle Dé, Mart. Taml. and Mart. Gorm. at Aug. 2.

III. THE LANGUAGE OF THE MARTYROLOGY.

We have now to consider the characteristics of the language of the Martyrology, especially as bearing on the date of its composition. In the first edition, the following forms were cited as proving that the language was Early Middle-Irish, and that the Martyrology could not have been composed “much before the end of the tenth century.”

nair Jan. 8, was taken to be the O. Ir. adverb anair with a Middle-Irish aphaeresis of a. But it is for náir, gen. sg. msc. of the adj. nár ‘high,’ ‘noble.’

na mbuidnib Ep. 295 was taken to be for O. Ir. inna m-buidnib ‘in their bands.’ But the true reading, preserved by P, is hi mbuidnib ‘in bands.’

in gáir Oc. 20, in togu, Prol. 123, were supposed to be instances of the Middle-Irish disuse of the neuter article. But the true readings are a ngáir and a togu, the substitution of which leaves the metre intact.

inna, na for the nom. pl. msc. of the article, were regarded as exclusively Middle-Irish. But they occur in the Old-Irish MSS. Ml. 38^c 9, 38^c 9, 80^a 10, and Wb. 29^a 16^a: see infra p. 338, s.v. ind.

hua June 21, is monosyllabic in the line hua Liathain in ligach. But the line should be emended thus, haue Liatháin ligach, where haue is, as in Old-Irish, disyllabic.

cethri chét, ceithri deich, Sep. 1, Oc. 16, 24, probably mere corruptions of the Old-Irish cethir chét (Thes. II. 29), cethir deich. So the acc. pl. used for the nom. pl. in na rét(g)lanna July 29, and tengtha Ep. 125 might have been quoted as Middle-Irishisms; but the corrections inna rétglainn and tengaid are obvious.

² Lebar Brecc 9^b. This is in prose. Their metrical rule is in the same MS. p. 261, and in H. 2. 16, cols. 224, 225.

which I supposed to be only Middle-Irish, is found in Wb. 8^d 22 (a gairte) and 18^e 6 (a threte).

The occurrence of the following verbal forms was also regarded as pointing to the tenth or eleventh century :

bebais ‘obit,’ Prol. 95, Feb. 18, Ap. 23, was taken to be a Middle-Irish formation from the O. Ir. redupl. pret. bebe. But it is a regular s-pret. from a reduplicated verb corresponding with Gr. βιβάω, βιβημι and Skr. jigāti, and here used euphemistically.

dorimemar, Ep. 6, taken to be a Middle-Irish 1 pl. pret. of the verb dorímu, which, in Old-Irish, would be doruirmisem. But the true reading is preserved in L and P, viz. do-ruimdemar, a regular formation from the deponent do-midiur.

conicsid Ep. 393, is obviously a scribal corruption of the O.-Ir. coníssid.

berthair, -trebháir Prol. 175, 176, for the Old-Irish plurals bertair, -trebtar. The correction is easy, and in Prol. 176 B and F have bertair.

asa ‘whose is,’ Prol. 50, 98 etc., ata ‘whose are’ March 14 etc. were supposed to be only Middle-Irish formations. But as a occurs in Ml. 2^c 3, issa in Ml. 90^c 3, and ata-n in Wb. 12^a 11, Ml. 12^b, and many other Old-Irish documents.

In syntax the government of the dative by the prep. itir, March 11, Nov. 23, and the accusative by the prep. iar (iarsin mbaigse), Ep. 315, are clearly Middle-Irish corruptions which may be removed without injuring the metre. At March 11, the line containing iter (or eter) is found only in three MSS. (LB, P, and C) and is apparently a comparatively recent substitute for isind flaith uas flaithib, the reading of R, L, and F. In Nov. 23, though all the MSS. have tonnaib in line 2 of the quatrain, this seems a scribal error due to the presence of thonnaib in line 4. In Ep. 315 C and B have preserved the true reading, viz. iarsin baigse.

The linguistic arguments against the antiquity of the Martyrology having thus been disposed of, let us now consider some archaic forms which point to the Old-Irish period, i.e. the seventh, eighth, and ninth centuries.

Disyllabism.

The following words, monosyllables in Middle-Irish, are still disyllabic in our Martyrology : aye Feb. 8, Ap. 11, June 21,¹ gen. haui May 16, Oct. 27, -bia, Jan. 13, Ep. 168 : glliad, criad Ap. 19 : *déac*² July 15, Sep. 22, deud, Prol. 220, dís Sept. 13, dia July 16, Ep. 166, lia (lie) Ap. 15 : luam Dec. 3 : Nois Prol. 84 : óac Sep.

¹ So in Fiacc's hymn 4 (haue, corruptly hou, deochain), and in the St. Paul codex aye Muredach, Thes. pal. bib. II. 295.

² So in Fiacc's hymn, l. 2, of which Prof. Bury (Life of St. Patrick, p. 264 note) says, “there is a metrical anomaly (duec [leg. déac] a disyllable).” This is no anomaly. In Old-Irish déac is always disyllabic.

22, siur, July 6, Dec. 14, triur Jan. 24, Dec. 14, coair Oc. 26, Ep. 432, 433, doaib Prol. 17, triut Ep. 438.

In LB and F disyllabism is sometimes marked by doubling a vowel, e.g. cooir, Noois, siuur, triuur.

Declension.

As a rule, the Old-Irish paradigms are followed. But Oengus tends to make oblique cases resemble the nom. sg. Thus the msc. o-stems Findach and Nárach have their genitives sg. Findach May 22, and Nárach March 8: so bordgal Prol. 275, baslic Nov. 19, and possibly trethan June 5. At Feb. 12, crochthae is dat. sg. fem., and in Ep. 458 the voc. sg. msc. of rathmar is identical with the nom. sg. of that adjective. The gen. pl. of dér = δάκρυ is dér, Ep. 400. The n-stems brú Hériu, triu and díle makes their dat. sg. brú Ep. 464, Hére July 31, íre, Ep. 25, 450, díle, Ep. 452. The dat. sg. of the t-stem is bethu, Ep. 201. The acc. sg. feli, Oc. 2, Dec. 30, seems from a fem. i-stem. Stems in u make their gen. sg. in -o: locho, Feb. 7, R, geno Oc. 3, R¹, or a: gena, Ap. 13, Sep. 16; betha, Prol. 140, 195, June 29, catha, datha.

Traces of a locative singular are: grían már des-maig Midi, Prol. 226, Senóc Mugnai tuathmaig lethain, Dec. 11: ní mair in drong úabair ráith Bécce, Prol. 197-8: ráid a paiss cinn bliadnae, Sep. 17: dogné init chorgaiss, Nov. 13.

The adjectival i-stems make their gen. pl. in -e, even when not used substantivally. Thus áille, Ep. 83, mathe July 23.

The nom. of the fem. numeral teoir 'three' occurs in Sep. 1, where it is disyllabic, like teuir (from tisores*), Thes. II, p. 291.

Comparison.

The superlative in m survives: amram Sep. 24: ardam March 23, Dec. 27, Ep. 207: deodam Ep. 498: nóibem July 14. But the Middle-Irish use of the comparative for the superlative is already beginning: amru Aug. 20: cádu March 20: dánu, daingniu May 23: dílsiu Prol. 262; díxu Jan. 18: ferdu Aug. 20: gluiniu Prol. 246, ísliu Prol. 153, nóebu Jan. 20, May 27; úagu Nov. 30, úaisliu Prol. 263, Jan. 18.

Infixed Pronouns.

The infixed pronouns in the Martyrology are as follows:

Non-relative forms.	Dental forms.
Sg. 1. m : before a vowel mm - dom-
Sg. 2. t - dat-
Sg. 3. msc. an : after do and ní , n fem. a , s(n) - dn -, - d -, - idn -, ¹ - id - da- neut. a, and after ní a cryptic pron.

which aspirates -d-, id, -did-

Pl. 1. n, before a vowel, nn -don-

2. b: before t, p (-dab-)

3. a, s (n) -da-

The dental forms are regularly relative: see for instance ar-don-sela, 'what escapes us,' June 23, and Ep. 376, 377, where fo-mi-glúassi means 'disquiets me,' but fo-dom-glúassi, 'what disquiets me,' but dental forms are used after ad- and some other preps. Thus in ataeoche-sa (ad-dat-t.), 'I entreat thee' Ep. 304, there is no relativity.

It is unnecessary to quote examples of the first and second persons, which are easily recognisable. The multiform pronouns of the third person are as follows:

Sg. 3 msc. an: n-an-ále Feb. 7, ó donánic Ap. 14, should perhaps be ó d-an-ánic, imm-a-curtis Ap. 27, f-a-rith Ep. 407. Dental form: no-dn-ále July 9, atnecham (ex ad-dn-techam) July 14, Dec. 21, 26, fortnédae (ex for-dn-édae) May 31, fortniáda July 31.

d: fo-d-ruair (lebrán) Ep. 67, fo-d-fuasna (ord) Ep. 102, fo-d-lugai (céssad) June 6, mani-d-chúala (Bartholom) June 13, no-d-dlomaim (ord) Prol. 315, no-d-géba (lebrán?) Ep. 113. After the prefix ad- the two dentals become t: at-gab (ad-d-gab) (Hiruath) Prol. 107 : at-coïs (Ciarán) Prol. 182 : at-róiriss (Valentinus) Dec. 16. After n and before another consonant the d is lost: dian promam (from dian-d-promam) Prol. 143, dian fesser (from dian-d-fésser) Oc. 24.

n: ro-n-noebat, ro-n-mórat, Ep. 59.

dn: nodnáli July 9. ? Jan. 19.

idn: con-neuch ad-idn-gíalla Feb. 23, in slúag con-idn-aicert Ep. 105, mad noebs ar-id-léga Ep. 178. So in Fiac's hymn 10, 47, con-id-farcaib, ar-id-rálastar.

Sg. 3 fem. a: d-a-rónaid Prol. 186.

s(n): ní-s-tarcáil June 29, do-s-ruimdemar Ep. 6.

Sg. 3 neut. a and the cryptic pron. do not occur in the Martyrology: ro-n-fethis (gein) June 24, is for ro-n-d-fethis: atsluindi for ad-d-sluindi (ainm) Prol. 110.

Pl. 3 a after do- and nach: d-a-ruirmisem Ep. 228.

¹ The pronouns -dидн-, -дид-, -идн-, -ид- occur only after нáч, the conjunction con, the relative in- 'in which,' and the prepositions ad-, os-, con-, for-, fri, imm- and in-. They are apparently cognate with the pronominal affix ide in a n-tec-ide 'their salvation' Wb. 4' 39, dat. inna diud-idi 'after it,' Thes. pal. hib. II. 251¹.

June 26, no-s-tuirfem Prol. 289, ní-s-gegnetar May 19, fo-s-dail July 15.

da : ar-da-légfa Ep. 216 : no-da-snáidfea Ep. 160, ro-da-ortsam Prol. 57, ro-da-crochsat Prol. 73, ata-snáim Oc. 26 (ad-da-s).

Verbal Particles.

The verbal particles are ad, com, no, ro and ror, of which ad, com and ro are used as perfective prefixes :

ad : conatuil (com-ad-t). ‘he has slept’ Aug. 7, con-idn-aicert (com-idn-ad-cert) ‘has corrected it.’

com : as-chom-art ‘who has been slain,’ Oc. 19, do-coemnagtar (to-com-nenigtar*) ‘they have washed,’ Jan. 4.

no is here used (a) with the imperfect indicative of simple verbs, (b) to infix a personal pronoun or relative n, and (c) to express relativity.¹ Examples of (c) are no molur Prol. 13; no ráidiu, Ep. 358 : no guidiu Ep. 387, no charim Ep. 50 : no rádi Feb. 18.

ro : Most of the occurrences of this common particle are collected in the glossarial index. In compound verbs it stands after the first, or only preposition : do-ro-dbad Prol. 96; imma-roerad Prol. 206 : fris-rocaib Oc. 24, fris-rocabsat Jan. 16 : con-ruala July 12, as-r-indaid Jan. 12 : do-rósat Prol. 91, do-r-indnacht Nov. 12, do-s-rui-mdemar Ep. 6. When the compound contains only one preposition : do-rignius im-ro-rdus Prol. 20; do-rui-rnius Ep. 40, ad-r-annad Ap. 5, ad-r-eth Prol. 120, do-r-ortad May 27, ad-roe-thach Ep. 300. It is omitted in atbath Ep. 318, tinscann May 1, fo-s-dail July 15, fo-raith Jan. 15, fo-truicset May 8, fris-indled May 23, and nad chumscaigset Feb. 6. It is prefixed to an originally compound verb in ro-s-tuirius Jan. 26 (cf. ru tuirset Ml. 44, 23).

ror : fo-ror-bairt Prol. 172 : fo-ror-cennata Prol. 87 : dom-ror-bae Prol. 25 ; and, with assimilation of r to the l of the root, rol-eb-laing March 5.

Conjugation.

In the verb, the Old-Irish distinction between the absolute and the conjunct forms is invariably preserved. Thus in the 3d sg. pres. ind. active we find the following absolute forms :

maraid Prol. 168, 204, 244, 252, bith-maraid 232, 255. moraith 116, bith-trágaith 231 ; and with affixed pronouns, berth-i Ep. 196, mórth-us Prol. 132, and the following conjunct forms :

I. o-verbs : ní mair Prol. 199, 203 ; ní dlig Jan. 6, na dlig March 7, ¹ For other cases in which it is used in Old-Irish, see Strachan, Selections from the Old-Irish Glosses, 1904, p. 112.

Ap. 25, ar-dlig June 1, Aug. 5, ní beir Prol. 223, do-beir March 31, Nov. 30, con-gaib Ap. 1, Ep. 76, 279, tuar-gaib March 9, ar-fich March 15, do-for-maig Ep. 195, 206, do-n-for-maig Oc. 18, most-ic July 9, to-t-ic May 25, *t-ar-ic*¹ July 19, fris'reith Prol. 302, fris-oing Ep. 444, do-reith Ap. 16.

II. ā-verbs: ad-idn-gialla Feb. 23, ar-don-sela June 23, for-tñ-íada July 31, fo-t-botha Nov. 15, ar-id-léga Ep. 178, fo-d-fúasna Ep. 102, for-cenna Ep. 282, -bruchta June 21, Nov. 29.

III. i-verbs: at-sluindi, Prol. 110, do-don-farci Jan. 26, don-ascnai May 12, Oc. 25, ni-s-starcai June 29, nond-áli July 9, ar-dom-túassi Ep. 374, fo-dom-glúassi Ep. 376, fo-m-glúassi Ep. 377, -dibdai Ap. 9, donn-ecrai Dec. 29.

The conjunct form of the 1st sg. of the same tense is exemplified by ad-sluindiu Ep. 320 etc., at-biur Ep. 103, ataeoche-sa (ad-dat-teoch*) Ep. 304, no-t-guidiu Prol. 265, Ep. 37, 312, 313, con-íagu Jan. 20, con-sádu Jan. 23, no-t-caru Ep. 311, ara imáigiu Ep. 360, do-rímu Ep. 317, no-n-áiliu Ep. 559.

Relative forms: sg. 1, no bágú Nov. 30, no guidiu Ep. 337, no ráidiu Ep. 358, no charim Ep. 50: sg. 3, beres, línas, crothas, guires, file: pl. 1. áilme Aug. 5, canmae Ep. 242, guidme Ep. 243, molmae Aug. 31: pl. 3. cantae Dec. 28, mairte Prol. 194.

Relativity is expressed by aspiration in ad-chissiu, Prol. 150, and as-chomart Oc. 19.

Reduplicated Future.

Sg. 2, lile-su (sic leg.) Prol. 309, 311, atom-didmae Ep. 494.

É-Future.

Sg. 3. absolute: gébaid Dec. 12, méraid Prol. 174:

conjunct: at-béla Ep. 116, no-t-géba Ep. 114, 166.

Pl. 1. -célam Ep. 86.

Pl. 3. at-bélat Prol. 247.

Reduplicated S-Future.

Sg. 2. at-róiriss Dec. 16.

Sg. 3. ar-sil Sept. 29 (sil ex sisl...*, from sligim), -fóir (= fo-rir) from fo-rigim Prol. 326.

Ā-Subjunctive.

Sg. 1. dorónsa Prol. 268, 269: SG. 2. tuiicc, fortñ-édae, dogné: SG. 3. dorogra, ron-sbéra, ron-glea: Pl. 2. darónaid Prol. 186: Pl. 3. don-r-emat, cotom-rócbat.

¹ In to-t-ic and t-ar-ic, as often in ro-icc, the orthotonic (or 'deuterotonic') form is replaced by the enclitic (or 'prototonic').

doriga Prol. 298, regmi Prol. 291, and do-ragat Ep. 115, are present subjunctives with the meaning of futures.

S-Subjunctive.

Absolute forms : Sg. 3, ainsium (ex ainis-um*) Jan. 31 : Pl. 1 resme (resmi?) Prol. 257.

Conjunct forms : Sg. 2, at-choïs Prol. 182, ro-ïs Ep. 146, conetis July 16, com-éir Aug. 26. Sg. 3, -tecma Jan. 10, ronn-ain Dec. 22, ro gé Ep. 364. Pl. 1, risam Dec. 17. Pl. 2, con-íssid Ep. 393. Pl. 3, dodigset Ep. 24, domm-ísat Ep. 36, -tísat Ep. 295, do-airset Sep. 20, -tairset Dec. 13.

Secondary forms : Sg. 3 : tésed Ap. 27, no-gessed Ep. 217, nachat-rised Prol. 284. Pl. 3 relative : tiastae Ep. 470, a ñigestae Ep. 432, 433.

S-Preterite.

Sg. 2. sóerais Ep. 486 : relative, amail sóersai Ep. 441, 445, etc.

Sg. 3. absolute : bebais Prol. 95, Feb. 18, Ap. 23, breuis Ap. 4, carais Jan. 15, céssais Jan. 17, crochais March 8, dálais Ap. 12, gabais July 6, mórais Aug. 18, sóerais Sep. 25 ; with affixed pronoun : tréeths-us Nov. 16, mórs-us Jan. 30, June 5. In June 15 and July 9, carais seems a third sg. relative, like caris in the Cambray Homily, Thes. II. 247, l. 4. So sóerais Sep. 25. But in March 24 we have car.

Pl. 3. conjunct : -crochsat Prol. 73, -carsat May 8 : absolute : carsait, March 15, May 7, lécsit Oc. 8.

T-Preterite and Perfect.

This tense occurs in the Martyrology only in sg. 3 and pl. 3. Sg. 3. ro-da-ort Prol. 57, as-ort Ap. 23, as-r-éracht Prol. 92, March 27, dorósat (to-ro-fo-ess-sem-t*) Prol. 91, birt Jan. 27, June 2; do-bert Ap. 14, Oc. 18, Nov. 2, adropart Ep. 269.

Pl. 3 ro síachtatar Prol. 70.

Reduplicated Preterite and Perfect.

The reduplicated preterite and perfect are still in constant use. Thus :

Sg. 1. adróithach Ep. 300, 301 (ad-ro-tethach*), -cúala June 13.

Sg. 3. cachain Ap. 26, Dec. 8 (leg. cechain?), cehaing Jan. 25, May 22, geguin Oc. 23, ro selaig (from seslaig*) Prol. 101, senaig (from sesnaig*) May 15, ar-ro-chiuir (from -cecri*), ro ír July 5, ro tetha Prol. 193 (pres. ind. tinim), t-ánic Jan. 11, Ap. 14, r-ánic May 2, Ep. 17, immeránic May 2, do-da-farnaic June 10.

Pl. 3. -gegnetar May 19, docoémnuachtar (to-com-ne-nigtar*) Jan. 4, ro selgatar Prol. 29, táncatar Ep. 88, ráncatar Prol. 78.

Unreduplicated Preterites and Perfects.

Of these, beside the s- and t- preterites, there are two classes, (a) those with a long vowel before a single consonant : (b) those with a short vowel :

(a) Sg. 1. ro gád-sa Ep. 412, ro-n-gáds-a, 421.

Sg. 3. ráith Jan. 6, Sep. 19, fo-ráith Jan. 5, ro scáich Nov. 22 ; Prol. 121, ro fir-scáich Prol. 84 ; (with affixed pron. ro scáich-i Prol. 177), do-cuaid Ep. 267 (from to-co-fáith*) : Pl. 3. ráthatar Sep. 28, rel. dochúatar Prol. 279.

(b) Sg. 3. rol-eb-laing March 5 (from lingim), dr-eb-raing Ap. 2, 17 ; do-ro-chair, -to-r-chair March 26, Ep. 361 (which serves as perfect to dotuit 'falls'), -sceith Feb. 16, frisnaig March 24, luid Prol. 128, Jan. 1 etc. 'mad tuluid' July 12 : Pl. 3. lotar May 5.

In ro éra Ep. 474, ro phraigdi Prol. 164 (= ropritchai, Trip. 40, l. 4) and ro chruidi Ep. 136, we seem to have presents made preterites by the prefix ro. See KSB. vii. 4 ; Strachan, Verbal System of the Saltair na Rann, p. 32, and cf. the passive form ro gabthar 'it was sung,' Ml. 24^d 14.

Deponents.

The deponential forms in the Martyrology are :

Pres. ind. sg. 1, frisáiliur Ep. 560. no molur Prol. 13, and perhaps conruidiur, Prol. 277 : sg. 2 armuinter Oc. 2, memraigther, March 2, ro clunter Prol. 282 : pl. 1. no-s-molamar Jan. 17 R¹.

Imperative sg. 2, cluinte Ep. 314, 365, 425, molthae Sep. 2, (where the MSS. have molatha, molotha).

Subjunctive sg. 2 : foraithmentar Sep. 8. ro fésser Feb. 4, dian fésser Oc. 24 :

Pret. sg. 3 génair, Dec. 25, mad-génair Prol. 251, dámair Feb. 9, 16. Perf. sg. 3 ro génair Sep. 24. pl. 1, do-s-ruimdemar Ep. 6. pl. 3, ro damnatar Prol. 53.

Passage from deponential to active forms is shown, I think, only in one verb, viz. molmae Aug. 31, the relative form of the pres. ind. pl. 1 of molur, and that such passage had commenced in the Old-Irish period is proved by the b-future molfait Ml. 69^b 1. The deponential inflexion seems to prove that our Martyrology is at the latest not later than the ninth century.¹

Passive.

In the passive, the pres. ind. 3 sg. and 3 pl. still observe the difference between the absolute and the relative (identical with the conjunct) forms. Thus bertar Prol. 175, 'who are carried off,' rínter Prol. 286, Ep. 46 'who are numbered ;' but icthair 'is healed,' Prol. 228, túirtir 'are scrutinised ' 230.

In the preterite sg. 3 the absolute forms end in -tae, -thae, the conjunct in -t, -th: absolute brethae Jan. 25, June 11, carthae May 9, crochthae Feb. 12, ortae Jan. 26, March 6, Sep. 7; séntae Prol. 100: slechtae Feb. 12: conjunct : -airecht Aug. 3, -ort Oc. 22, as-ort Oc. 7, as-chom-art Oc. 9, do-rindnacht Nov. 12, -slecht Feb. 20, June 16, ro sreth Aug. 25, -frith March 10, June 16, July 30, (so as-breth, do-breth). In -closs Oc. 15 (from klusto*) the t has been assimilated to the s of the root klus 'to hear' (cf. Zend. a-srusta, OHG. hlosen). In -fiss Prol. 135, ss is from d-t.

In ā-verbs the perfect sg. 3 ends in -a-d: ro crochad Prol. 89, doro-dbad 96: ro mórad, ro rígad 103, 104, ro múchad 169, roéraad 206, ro lénad 253. In ī-verbs it ends in -ed, ro milled Prol. 213.

In the 3rd pl., the manuscripts of our Martyrology point to -ta, -tha for o- and ā-verbs, and to -tea, -thea for ī-verbs. This is the rule in the Old-Irish glosses : see GC.² 478.

Reduplicated future pl. 3. do-génatar, Ep. 176 (gén- from gign-).

Participle of necessity : ráti Ap. 9, gessi Dec. 2, Sep. 28, clithi Dec. 9, Ep. 306, fissi Ep. 335, dénti Ep. 392.

Verb Substantive and Copula.

The forms which in the Martyrology make up the verb substantive and copula are collected in the glossarial index, s.vv. am, atá, bíuu, dianda, dochuissin, feil, ním-tha and táu. Of these the atonic am is from em*, Goth. im, Gr. εἰμί, Lith. esmì, Skr. ásmi: táu, atá (ad-tá), dian-da and ním-tha are cognate with Lat. stō: bíuu with Lat. vīvo; and feil (originally meaning *voici*¹) with the Irish fili 'poet' (seér), Cymr. gweled 'to see,' and Old Norse völvu 'seéress.' Nímtha 'not so is' is from ní-imtha, and im-tha ('so is') is a compound of tá (=Lat. stat) and im, cognate with Lat. imitor, imago, aemulor.

Syntax.

So much for the ancient grammatical forms of the Martyrology. Its syntax is also highly archaic. Thus the dat. pl. is often used as an instrumental, without a governing preposition : for instance :

iarna fœbraib fennad 'after flaying them with sword-edges,' Prol. 48. ind locáin ro gabtha déissib ocus trírib 'the little places that have been taken by pairs and by trios,' Prol. 209.

Agnetis deich n-íagaiib 'Agnes with ten virgins,' Jan. 27.

asrola sáeth sétaib ‘has escaped by ways of tribulations,’ Ap. 3.

Cyriacus crochthae trib cétaib don-ascnai ‘Cyriacus who was crucified comes to us with three hundreds,’ May 12.

Ciar trib cétaib cáinib ‘Ciar with three fair hundreds,’ Oc. 16.

The dative pl. is used without a preposition also in is dallchéilliu dóinib ‘tis a blind direction to men,’ Prol. 316, and in lúaidfidir láedib limmsa ‘it will be sung in lays by me,’ Thes. pal. hib., 295. An instance of a similar use of the dative sg. is fóisitin óendataid ‘through confession of the oneness,’ ibid. 354, and cf. cunn, céill, curp Ep. 52, colbu Ep. 74.

Again, the genitive, singular or plural, often precedes the governing noun. For instance :

la fége frithgnam ‘with diligence of keenness,’ Prol. 331.

martrae mórsus dorus ‘martyrdom’s door magnified them,’ Jan. 30

lir dar doe ‘over the sea’s rampart,’ March 22.

Marta for slúaig saithiu ‘on the swarm of March’s host,’ March 31.

asrola sáeth sétaib ‘has escaped by ways of tribulations,’ Ap. 3.

céssais roë rindi ‘he suffered spearpoints of battle,’ Ap. 26, tre roë rindi, Aug. 27.

ar Bledma bailc béláib ‘in front of strong (Sieve) Bloom,’ Nov. 20.

Nouimbir for slúaigu ‘on November’s hosts,’ Nov. 30.

Sluind Decimbir calaind ‘declare December’s calends,’ Dec. 1.

slathla Críst is colbu ‘is for (through) love of Christ’s kingdom,’ Ep. 74.

tar sálmuire sretha ‘over ranges of main-seas,’ Ep. 238.

For other Old-Irish examples see Z.² 915 : fidbaidæ fál, Thes. II. 291, l. 7, frega fál, ib. 293, l. 22 : su thocaid tugaib, ib. 295, l. 4 : di Moisten míne mrugaib, ib. 295, l. 5 : robbet inna lobrán leith

ib. 348, l. 5 ; and see Rev. Celt. v. 351.¹ For a like construction in Old-Welsh poetry, see Rhŷs *Lectures*² 153 (Kenetyl noted ‘the nation’s refuge,’ Kimerev trin ‘Cymmerau’s conflict,’ riein garea ‘delight of women’). To these we may perhaps add the ogham Trenaccat lo ‘Tringad’s grave,’ and part of the Gaulish bilingual of Todi: Ategnati Drutikni karnidu logan Koisis Drutiknos ‘Coisis son of Drutos heaped up the tomb of Ategnātos son of Drutos.’

A third archaism in our Martyrology is the frequent position of the adjective before the substantive with which it agrees. Thus cráibdig i féil Fursa, Jan. 16, ard áige Prol. 119, 243, ard imbel 131, étrocht áge, Feb. 10, cáin cathar, Aug. 15.

A fourth archaism is the occasional position of the accusative before the governing verb. Thus :

ar Christ cech imbáis breuis ‘for Christ’s sake he vanquished every lust,’ Ap. 4.

lucht fris’ fáilti ferainm ‘the folk to whom I make welcome,’ Ep. 49.

félire ro scrútus ‘I have searched out martyrologies,’ Ep. 109.

á Issu, mórfertae dorignis ‘O Jesus, who hast wrought great miracles,’ Ep. 506.

The result is that, with one exception, the grammar and syntax of our Martyrology may be regarded as strict Old-Irish. The exception is the occasional use of the comparative for the superlative. It now seems to me that it is easier to believe that this Middle-Irishism existed as early as A.D. 800 than to cast aside the traditional evidence that Oengus wrote about that date. This belief is confirmed by the facts that the author has only one vigil (Aug. 15); that he has only five festivals of the B.V. Mary (there are in the Roman calendar fourteen ‘of universal obligation’); and that no saint or other person who certainly died in the ninth century is mentioned in his Martyrology. Paulus Diaconus (Ap. 13), who died before A.D. 800, and Aireran of the Wisdom (Aug. 11), who succeeded Maelruain A.D. 792, are the most modern saints here commemorated; and it is possible that here the scholiast erred, and that this Aireran was meant by Oengus for the Aileran ind ecni, who died in the year 604. That our Martyrology was not written before the ninth century is proved by the mention of S. Joseph at March 19.¹

IV. THE METRE OF THE MARTYROLOGY.

Only five metrical martyrologies are known to me, viz.: Baeda's *Martyrologium Poeticum*¹ (which at March 17 contains the line Patricius² Domini servus concendit ad aulam), the Martyrologium Wandalberti,³ the Anglo-Saxon Menologium Poeticum,⁴ the Martyrology of Gorman,⁵ and the Martyrology of Oengus. The first two are in Latin hexameters. The Martyrology of Gorman is in the Irish metre called rinnard móir, 'great rinnard,' in which the stanzas may consist of 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, or even 14 lines. The Martyrology of Oengus consists of 591 quatrains, each of which is independent in sense. The elaborate metre (rinnard) in which they are written is described, not quite completely, in the prose prefaces. Its chief characteristics are as follows:

1. Each line of the quatrain contains six syllables. The solitary exception is Ep. 459, where Lóth should perhaps be corrected to Lóthus.

2. Each line must end (like the Ovidian pentameter) in a disyllable. To this rule there are exceptions in the case of alaile, araile and of foreign proper names.⁶ And Irish verbs compounded with prepositional prefixes are, for metrical purposes, regarded as being in tmesi. So the proclitics—the article, possessive pronouns, verbal prefixes, copula, prepositions, negative particles, are not regarded as part of the words with which they are written in the MSS. On the other hand, the pronominal suffixes -ni, -sa, -se, -si, -sin, -su, -som, are deemed (for metrical purposes) to convert the monosyllables to which they are annexed into disyllables.

3. Each end-word must be accented on the penult. Take, for example, the quatrains for Jan. 1 and Jan. 10:

Ré síl dálach dóine tóidéid in rí remain,
luid fo recht ard erail
Críst i callaind enair.

Álmini a n-itge
náchan tecma drochraann,
Milit cáid cain cathbarr, Diarmait Inse Clothraann.

² So in Baeda's prose Martyrology, at March 17, in Scotia S. Patricii confessoris. And yet a writer who ought to know better, asserts that Baeda 'studiously ignored S. Patrick.'

³ Migne's Patrologia Latina, t. cxxi., coll. 585–623. Wandalbert, a monk in the diocese of Treves, wrote about 50 years after Oengus.

⁵ Edited by W. S. and issued by the Henry Bradshaw Society in 1895.

⁶ In Stepháni Dec. 26, Oengus (metri gratia) has not only accented, but lengthened the penult. Cf. Stepháno, Merchant of Venice, v. 1.

Here the four end-words happen to be nouns; but the rule is the same in the case of paroxyton verbs. Thus in the prologue 233-236 and 141-144:

In gormríg ro múchtha,
in Domnaill ro plágtha,
in Chíaráin ro rigtha,
in Chronáin ro mártha.

Bíd ar menmae uile
ar thúaith Dé nad celam, is torbe dian promam
in prolach do-beram.

Here in one quatrain the four end-words, and in the other the last three end-words, are verbs accented on the penult. Many more such instances will be found in the Revue Celtique vi. 283-285, where all the verbal line-endings in our Martyrology are collected.

4. The end-words of the second and fourth lines must assonate, i.e., the vowels must be the same and the consonants must be of the same class.

The consonantal classes are as follows:

- (1) c, t, p, and uninflected g, d, b.
- (2) ch,¹ th, ph, ff.²
- (3) gh, dh, bh, mh, n, r, l.
- (4) mm, nn,³ ng, rr, ll.
- (5) s.⁴

5. Final -e in the first and third lines may assonate with final ae in the second and fourth lines, and final i in the first and third lines may assonate with final -ai in the second and fourth lines. Thus ae in togae Jan. 6 assonates with inglaine and Maire, and ai in Tiamdai Aug. 22 assonates with ñáni and Emiliani: see further Strachan, Rev. Celt. xx, 191, 295.

6. The end-word of the third line may assonate with a disyllable in the interior of the fourth line. But where such assonance is absent, the final syllable of the third line must assonate with the final syllables of the second and fourth lines: see Prol. 25-28, where -sa in the third line assonates with -sa in the second and fourth:⁵ or the final syllable of the third line must assonate with the final syllable of a word in the interior of

² Thus fethis, cathlaic, clithi respectively rhyme with Ffis, Affraic, Liffi, a proof, if such were wanted, that in Old-Irish th was pronounced somewhat like the English dental spirant in thing. See Rev. Celt. III. 186, and Celt. Zeits. I. 454.

³ mn rhymes with mnt at July 30, with nt at Nov. 21.

the fourth. See Prol. 5–8, and 157–160, where the final syllable of aingliu assonates with the final syllable of choimndiu, and Prol. 42–44, 281–284, 329–332, and Feb. 4, 13, 14, 19, where the final consonants of calad, altar, frithgnam, úasal, nualann, clandad, máinech assonate with the final consonants of lines 2 and 4.

When the final syllables of lines 1, 2, 3, and 4 assonate the metre is called rinnard cethir n-ard ‘rinnard of four rhyming final syllables.’ For example, at March 17 and June 17:

Lassar gréne áne apstal Hérenn hóge Pátraic co méit míle rop dítiu ar tróge	In doss óir ós chríchaib, in grían án úas túathaib, congreet ríg, balc bráthair, cáid míl, Moling Lúachair.
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

When the final syllables of lines 2, 3, and 4 assonate the metre is called rinnard trí n-ard ‘rinnard of three rhyming final syllables.’ For example, at Jan. 4 and June 14:

Bás caid Aquilíni co mbuidin ba balcu hi ful Christ trea curpu dccóemnachtar tlachtu	Conrecat dib líníb for óenlíth ler slúagach, Nem maccu Birn brígach, la Benedicht imbúadach.
-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

and so in the quatrain for Jan. 1, where -ain, -ail, -air are the three assonating ards, and in that for Jan. 27, where lines 2, 3, and 4 end in -aib.

When the final syllables of only lines 2 and 4 assonate the metre is called rinnard dá n-ard ‘rinnard of two rhyming final syllables.’ Thus at Jan. 24 and June 22:

Domm anmain, domm chorpán rop mún ar cech merblén, Babill, bruth óir forlan cona thriur dedblén.	La hIacób iñAlphaei dá nocht cét, clíar ñgeldae, féil fir nád char corplén Cronán fortrén Fernae.
-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

In the Irish prefaces the quatrain for March 1 is given as an example of rinnard dá n-ard. If this be not a mistake, Moysi in line 3 should be Moyse, and then the two ards are the final syllables of ñgudi and Muni.

7. In each quatrain there must be alliteration (úaim), that is to say, two, three or more accented syllables must begin with the same letter—all the vowels being, for this purpose, deemed identical, and h, infected f and transported nasals being disregarded. For example, in the quatrain for Jan. 7, -áni, (h)úaisliu and Íssu alliterate, and in the quatrain for Jan. 4, mbuidin and balcu are regarded as beginning with the same letter. Needless to quote other examples of consonantal alliteration.

8. The last characteristic of rinnard is what the Irish preface in R² (supra p. 14) calls fídrad cubaid etir tosaichib na rann ocus deridib na rann ele ‘an harmonious juncture between the beginnings of the quatrains and the ends of the other (i.e. the last preceding) quatrains,’ and what modern Irish scholars call conachlann.¹ This agreement is not obligatory. It may be either complete, as in the case of the third quatrain of the invocation prefixed to the prologue—the first line of which is identical with the last line of the second quatrain—or partial, as when the first accented word in the second quatrain—gelgrian—alliterates with gile, the final word of the first. So rígrad, the first accented word in the fourth quatrain, alliterates with rígraigd. So in the quatrains for the first seven days of February, the pairs Érenn and Airitiu, airi and Andreas each begin with a vowel, and each of the pairs Simfróni and Fronius, crésen and crochthae, míli and Mellán, begin with the same consonant. The object of this device is, of course, to aid the memory. There is, I believe, in Welsh verse a similar device called adgymmeriad ‘anadiplosis,’ and there is something like it in a French poem quoted in Isaac Disraeli’s Curiosities of Literature, London, 1838, p. 108, where the last word of every line is identical with the first word of the following line.

I have dwelt at some length on the characteristics of this metre, partly because nothing is more important for correcting the corrupt text of a poem (and every copy of the Martyrology is full of scribal corruptions) than a right understanding of the rules by which the author was guided; partly because observation of the technical skill of the maker of the poem now printed is almost the only source of pleasure derivable from his work; and partly because Ezzardi’s suggestion² that the metre of the Martyrology of Oengus appears to have been the model of the Skaldic dróttkvætt, especially the hattlausa, makes the Irish rinnard matter of interest for Teutonic, as well as for Celtic, scholars.

V. THE CONTENTS OF THE POEM.³

After an invocation of Christ, who is called ‘Lord of the seven heavens,’ ‘King of the bright sun,’ and a reference to the saints

² In Paul u. Braune’s Beitrag zur Geschichte der deutschen Sprache u. Literatur, 1878, ss. 583, 584. Ezzardi cites from O’Donovan’s Irish Grammar the quatrain for March 17, and says Dies versmass scheint das vorbild des dróttkv. zunächst der hattlausa, gewesen zu sein. For a specimen of dróttkvætt see Ker, The Dark Ages, p. 302.

mentioned in the Martyrology, the poet begins his prologue (ll. 21–340). He describes (ll. 29–48) the various modes of martyrdom which the warriors of Jesus (mílid Ísu) suffered with cheerful heroism. They now, unlike the great pagan kings, enjoy their eternal reward with Mary's Son, while their relics are enshrined in sparkling gold (ll. 49–84). Herod and Pilate are then contrasted with Christ, Nebudchadnezzar with Paul the Monk, Herod and his queen with John the Baptist, Nero with Peter and Paul, Pilate's queen with Mary the Virgin. Then come some reflections on the nothingness of earthly power and mundane potentates as compared with the love of Mary's Son and with the lowly soldiers (amsáin) of Jesus. In Ireland, for example, Tara, the seat of the heathen high-kings, has perished,¹ while Armagh remains with her crowd of Christian champions. King Lóiguire's glory has departed, but St. Patrick's name lives on. Various ruined strongholds of the pagan Irish—Rathcroghan, Allen, Emain and others—are then contrasted with the monasteries—Clonmacnois, Kildare, Glendalough, Ferns—which flourished in the ninth century. The forgotten renown of pagan chieftains, like Donnchad, Bran and Domnall, is contrasted with the abiding glory of Christ and the Irish saints, Mael-rúain, Ciarán, Cronán. The poet then breaks out into a laudation of Jesus, prays for success in the work in hand, and concludes his prologue by describing the nature of the Martyrology.

Then comes the Martyrology, which consists of 365 quatrains (or 366, if we include the one for bisertus in the note on Feb. 23). Unlike the Martyrology of Tallaght and the Anglo-Saxon Menologium, which begin with Dec. 25, Oengus commences with the feast of the Circumcision, and ends with that of S. Sylvester. The Crucifixion and Conception of Christ are commemorated on the same day (March 25). As in the Hieronymian Martyrology, and the Martyrology of Tours,² the Resurrection of our Lord is fixed at March 27. His first Ascension is at May 5 (so in Galba A. xviii. fo. 7^a, and Harl. 863, fo. 3^a); the mission of the Apostles is at July 15: the nativity of Mary Magdalen, at July 22. In associating (Jan. 6) the Epiphany with Christ's Baptism, and not with the visit of the Magi, Oengus follows the tradition of the Eastern, rather than that of the Western Church.³ So he follows the Greek, not the Roman, church in celebrating S. Euphemia at July 11. Probably there are other like instances obvious to anyone more familiar than I with Christian hagiology. S. John the Baptist's nativity is at June 24 : his conception at Sep. 24. Gallican influence appears in the commemoration of the Circumcision (not the octave of the Nativity) on Jan. 1 : of the Assumption of the Virgin and the Cathedra S. Petri on Jan. 18 : of the Passion on March 25 : of the Resurrection on March 27 : of St. John and St. James on Dec. 27.¹

Oengus mentions (p. 270) as his foreign sources the 'vast tome (pairt) of Ambrose, the Sensus of Hilary, the Antigraph of Jerome, and the Martyrology of Eusebius.² What work of Ambrose (or Ambrosiaster) is meant, I cannot imagine. Hilary's 'Sensus' is equally obscure, whether the Hilary referred to was Hilary of Poitou or Hilary of Arles.³ Jerome's Antigraph (ἀντίγραφον) is doubtless the Pseudo-Jerome, the so-called Martyrologium Hieronymianum, so carefully edited by De Rossi and Duchesne, and so often cited in this book as Mart. Hier. The MS. used by Oengus resembled the Epternach copy, which is said to represent a British form of the Martyrology.³ The 'Martyrology of Eusebius' may be the lost work of Eusebius on which the Martyrologium Hieronymianum is said to be based. Or it may be the ἀρχαῖων μαρτύρων συναγωγή, of which, according to Herzfeld, one part, entitled De Martyribus Palaestinae, has been preserved.

Bishop Forbes has remarked that nearly all the Irish saints commemorated by Oengus are the same as those in the [twelfth century?] kalender contained in the Drummond Missal, but that the selection of non-Irish saints is very different.⁴

How little the Irish Church of the early Middle Ages knew of foreign saints is evidenced by the facts that Oengus, at May 28, mistakes Germanus of Paris, who died A.D. 576, for Germanus of Auxerre (ob. A.D. 448) the tutor of S. Patrick : at Aug. 16, he puts Adrio for Orion an Alexandrian martyr : at June 4, Apollinaris for the Egyptian Apollonius. At July 21 he treats the Roman virgin Praxides as if she was a male saint ; and at Feb. 3 and 4, he has made imaginary saints, 'Simfronius' and 'Fronius,' out of the latter part of a place-name, Forum Semproni, now Fossombrone, in Umbria. The mediaeval glossators are equally ignorant. Thus Siric, Nov. 26, said to be an Irish bishop of Mag Bolg, is certainly the pope Siricius, who died on Nov. 26, A.D. 398. St. Oswald, Aug. 5, is confounded with Aldfrid (Flann Fína) : Constantine, the successor of Mochutu, abbot of Rathen (p. 92), with Constantine son of Fergus : Isidorus of Antioch with Isidorus of Seville : Lupus the martyr with Lupus, bishop of Troyes : Publius, an African martyr, with a Paulus unknown at Feb. 19 : Apollinaris the Christian writer with Apollinaris of Ravenna, the martyr.

As is the case with the oldest martyrologies, the entries in our Félire are generally of the most meagre description. Here they consist of the name of the Irish or foreign saint commemorated, with some stock epithet or standing phrase tacked on, so as to comply with the exigencies of metre, rhyme, and alliteration. But sometimes brief reference is made to a tradition, a tale, or a legend. Thus in the Prologue 2, and in the Epilogue 120, 401, Oengus speaks of the seven heavens, a number which seems ultimately derived from the Babylonian seven tubukāti,¹ whence the seven heavens of Judaism, of Islam, and of the apocryphal Revelation of Peter,² chap. 27. At Jan. 27, the poet mentions the wild story of Lí-bán or Muirgein, the mermaid, told in Lebor na huidre, pp. 40, 41 :³ at Feb. 6 the legend of Lucia, who could not be dragged to martyrdom : at Feb. 6 the tradition of the introduction of bees into Ireland : at Feb. 16 the legend of Juliana and the Devil :⁴ at March 9 the legend of the forty Cappadocian soldiers to whom the sun shone at the bottom of a lake : at April 9 the belief that the blood of the martyr Quadratus still remains. This belief is paralleled, and perhaps explained, by one still held in Ireland. In the S.W. corner of Tech Molaisse on Inismurray is a dark red appearance caused by the growth of a small fungus. The natives say that it is caused by the blood of the martyred saint, and that however often it is scraped away, it will always come again.⁵ Then at April 5 we have the kindling (i.e., the commencement) of baptism by S. Patrick : at April 14 the tradition (mentioned also in Fíacc's hymn) that bishop Tassach houseled the dying apostle of the Irish : at April 17 the pathetic tale of the martyrdom of Donnán of Eig : at Aug. 16 the story of the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus⁶ ; at Aug. 24, the mention of Patrick senior, as the fosterer of St. Patrick :¹ at Aug. 25, the tradition of St. Bartholomew's death : at Sep. 4 the legend of the orphans playing round Ultan, who had saved them from dying of hunger : at Sep. 23, the story of Adamnán's liberation of Irishwomen from military service : at Sep. 29 the legend of S. Michael the Archangel and Antichrist : at Oct. 23 the wounding of Christ by Longinus : at Nov. 23 the legend of Clement and the sea : at Dec. 8 that of Egbert and his skinless coracle ; and at Dec. 21 the traditional death of St. Thomas in India. Here we have traces of that tendency to give a fuller form to the primitive martyrologies, which was first displayed by Baeda (ob. 735), and then developed by Florus (about 830), Rabanus Maurus (about 840), Usuard (about 875) and Notker (about 912).

The body of our Martyrology is followed by the Epilogue, or, as the Irish oddly call it, the final Prologue. After referring generally to the Martyrology, and acknowledging Christ's help in composing it, Oengus prays for eternal life along with the saints whom he has commemorated. He declares that they have blessed whomsoever shall sing it, and that they will come to attend him when he dies. The poet then enumerates his sources, the four works already mentioned, and 'Ireland's host of books, the martyrologies of the men of the Gaels.' He again refers to the blessings bestowed on the reciter of his poem, the last mentioned (ll. 221–224) being :

“ His soul without conflict in heaven with brightness, after him when he has attained it,
the dew of his grave will heal. ”²

The poet then classifies the persons commemorated—the nine ranks of angels, prophets, apostles, martyrs, bishops, saints, priests, monks and virgins of Ireland, who will all, he says, befriend him. After praying the saints to beseech Christ on his behalf, he adjures Jesus by the sufferings of saints and penitents, by the offerings of His Body and Blood, by His Manhood and His Godhead, to grant him what he is contending for. The rest of the Epilogue resembles the commendatio animae quando infirmus est in extremis,³ and is occupied with longings to pass from the afflictions of the world, and prayers to be saved like Elijah and Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Lot, Jonah, Isaac, Jacob, the Children of Israel, Job, Samson, David, Susannah, the three children, Tobit, the people of Nineveh, Daniel, Moses, Paul and Peter, John 'from the vat of fire,' Martin 'from the priest of the idol,' Patrick 'from the poisonous drink at Tara,' Coemgin 'from the falling of the mountain.'

The poem concludes with another prayer to be saved, and an entreaty that the saints commemorated in the Martyrology may convoy us to our solace.

It must be confessed that in all this long composition there is not a trace of imaginative power or of observation of nature and human life as they really are. Here, as in the Martyrology of Gorman, the language is, as Wordsworth said of the English verse of the eighteenth century, the language of men composing without their eye on the object. Here, as in most of the Irish verse that has come down to us, substance is ruthlessly sacrificed to form, and the observance of the rigorous rules of metre seems regarded as an end in itself. Touches characteristic of the poet's time and country are here almost wholly absent. The quatrain for May 17, in which Oengus treats three saints as if they were three Irish chieftains making a raid into heaven in their war-chariots, is about the only passage that can be quoted as racy of the soil.¹ It is perhaps an adaptation of a formula inherited from earlier bardic poetry. The frequent metaphorical use in the Martyrology of words meaning sun, moon, star, diadem, flame, gold, housepost, pillar, town, rampart, bush and mountain may also be due to secular song. Compare, for instance, the poem in praise of King Crimthan, attributed to Dubthach ua Lugair (LL. 45^a), where, in the course of the first five verses, that monarch is called drumne d'ór 'house-ridge of gold,' in bréo bágach 'the warlike flame,' in slíab dergóir 'the mountain of red gold,' and lastly, in doss dítnes dronga Domnann 'the bush that protects the troops of Meath.'

VI. THE NOTES.

Every copy of the Martyrology contains, besides interlinear or marginal glosses, bodies of notes in Irish, or mediaeval Latin, or a mixture of both, written between the lines, or on the margins, or after the quatrain or month referred to. Of the sources of these notes nothing certain is known. But from the statement in Laud 610 at June 15 (infra p. 140), we may fairly infer that a commentary (trachtad) on the Martyrology, existed in Armagh, if not 'from the time of the saints,' at least from an early period; and that some, at all events, of the entries in the notes were derived from this commentary.

For the entries relating to the constitution and discipline of the Irish church, to Irish architecture, metal-work, calligraphy, embroidery, music and verse, to the food, homes, morals, laws and amusements of the Gaels, reference may be made to the first edition of our Martyrology, pp. 24, 25, and to the Index of Things in the present volume. Here I shall only notice the scholia that throw some light on early Irish religious practices, superstitions, folklore, and legal antiquities.

(a) Religious Practices.

Of these the most frequently mentioned is fasting (troscud), a practice belonging in ancient Ireland to the sphere of law¹ as well as to that of religion. Here it is used for the fall of a tree worshipped by the heathen (p. 118), for the cure of dumbness, p. 166, for the restoration of an eye, p. 244, to procure the death of a hated saint, p. 204. It sometimes lasted for three days, and was then called tredan (pp. 36, 69, 235), a loan from the Latin triduana. The lenten fasts of Moses and Jesus, each lasting for forty nights, are mentioned in pp. 32, 42, 234. For the benefits of fasting coupled with prayer, see Adamnán's Second Vision, Revue Celtique xii. 432-438.

Prayer: for this there are no less than six native Irish vocables, attach, aurgaiss, dubart, ernaigthe, guide, itge, and one loanword, diprecóit. Prayer is addressed to God, p. 271, to Christ, pp. 279, 282, 283, to the saints, pp. 17, 35, 80, and is made on our behalf by them and the martyrs, pp. 163, 274. The prayer of a hundred believers is said to be equivalent to a recitation of the Martyrology, p. 273. The Irish used at least three postures in their worship, viz., kneeling on both knees, kneeling with the arms stretched out in a cross, and prostration. Erc Nascai (p. 130) prayed (standing upright?) in water² with a tie round his neck. Prayers, as well as curses, were most effective when the right hand was employed. See p. xxiv supra, and p. 200 infra. Genuflexion is twice mentioned, pp. 12, 154, and in the poem printed supra, p. xxiv, Oengus is said to have made three hundred every night.

² So S. Cuðberht, bishop of Lindisfarne, in the sea, Vita c. 10.

Austerities.—It is hard to say whether Irish saints or Indian yogis practised the cruelest austerities. Many of them are described in Lives of Saints from the Book of Lismore, p. cviii, and in Cuimmin's poem, Zeitschr. für celtische Philologie, i. 62–66. In the present work the strangest are ascribed to Findchu, who used to lie the first night with every corpse that was brought to his church for burial, and at other times sat suspended by a sickle in each of his armpits (p. 246). Ciarán of Saiger's bolster was of stone (p. 88). Columb cille's broth was made of nettles (p. 146). Flagellation is mentioned in p. 280, as practised by Oengus himself. Íte kept a stag-beetle to pierce her side (p. 42), and Fursa transferred to his own stomach the devouring reptile which Maignenn had entertained in his belly (p. 44). The story of Scothíne sleeping with two maidens (p. 40) tends to prove the existence in Ireland of an ascetic practice favoured by an early Christian sect and by Robert d'Arbrissel the founder of Fontevrault.¹

Pilgrimage.—The Irish passion for pilgrimage lasted from the sixth to at least the ninth century. The subject is well dealt with in the Gaelic Life of St. Columba, Lismore Lives, ll. 698–720, and in Plummer's Baeda II. 170. In the present work we read not only of pilgrimages to Glastonbury and Rome, but to places in Ireland, such as Ferns and Rathen. Pilgrimage to Maclruain's grave is suggested in p. 26. But the great religious migration from Ireland to the Continent, which prevailed in the eighth and following centuries, was viewed with disfavour by Maclruain and the sages (sruithi) whom he consulted.²

Collection and worship of Relics.—Relics were not only worn on the person, but were essential to the consecration of churches, and the practice of gathering them is here illustrated by the story of Onchu and Maedóc (p. 70), the tale of Patrick's leper, Comlach, p. 204, and the account of Adamnán's collection (p. 210). They were sometimes enshrined in gold (p. 20). Special notice is taken of the relics of Saints Peter and Paul (pp. 46, 220), Thomas (p. 166), Martin (p. 144), Patrick (p. 204), Columb cille (p. 156), and the reciter of the Martyrology (p. 274). A special feast of holy relics is fixed at Oct. 1; but it is not clear from the scholium in p. 220, where this feast was celebrated. The relics 'consecrated to Michael' (p. 12), may have been the contents of a reliquary in the monastery of Tallaght.

Worship of Crosses.—This seems implied in the story about Hua Suanaig's cross (p. 466), and in the poem cited supra, p. xxiv, §§ 2, 4. With the 'clcister behind the circle of crosses' compare the circular device in H. J. Lawlor's Chapters on the Book of Mulling, p. 167. Signing a banquet 'with the cross of God and Eusebius' is mentioned in p. 210.

(b) Superstitions and Folklore.

Idolatry (ídvladrád) is referred to in p. 74, in the case of the Roman virgin Juliana; and the Gaulish idol from whose priest S. Martin was saved is mentioned in p. 288. But these are foreign instances. The oldest evidence that the Irish worshipped idols (idula) is contained in S. Patrick's Confession, Book of Armagh, fo. 24^b. In the curious passage cited from F, infra p. 186, an Irish idol, Cerman Cestach, worshipped at Clogher, is described as being a gilded stone. Compare the accounts of Cenn (or Crom) Crúaich, in the Tripartite Life, p. 90, and the Dindsenchas, nos. 85, 149. His twelve sub-gods were probably fetish-stones, and the persistence of stone-worship in Ireland is proved by the expression ail adrada 'rock of adoration' in the Brehon Laws, iv. 146, l. 16.¹ Other superstitions, which obviously originated in the times of savage heathenism, are exemplified by the three stories of impregnation—the birth of Ciarán of Saiger from a star (p. 86); that of Fínán Camm from a golden salmon² (p. 112); that of Báithín from a sprig of cress, semine virili cooperta (p. 134). As to the origin of such stories from an early theory of conception, see Dr. J. G. Frazer, in the Fortnightly Review for September, 1905, pp. 455–457. Here, too, may be mentioned the cure of leprosy by the blood of innocent children (p. 46): the tale of Fuinche the Rough and her miraculous dive under Lough Erne (p. 50) when she emerged, like Glaucus, covered with shells and seaweed:³ the story of Lí-bán (or Muirgein) the mermaid (p. 52) caught in a fisherman's net: the legends about S. Brigit⁴ (pp. 64, 66), especially the incident of the column of fire flaming from her head: the legend of Sillán of the deadly Hair (p. 206): the prevention of decay by healing (i.e., magical) herbs (p. 246): the exchange of diseases (p. 4):

³ See The Republic of Plato, Bk. x, c. 11: ἀλλα δὲ προσπεφυκέναι, ὅστρεά τε καὶ φύκια καὶ πέτρας, κ.τ.λ.

the exchange of names in token of brotherly union (p. 224), a practice which Captain Cook found in Tahiti, and which was also common among North-American Indians : the belief in shape-shifting evidenced by the tale of Ríoc and Drusticc, p. 238n.¹

Such superstitions may well have existed in a society where infants were exposed (p. 180), children sacrificed,² and women driven to battle³ (p. 210). The strange thing is that they have been recorded in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, by scribes who presumably believed what they wrote down. The raids of the Vikings, the Anglo-Norman invasion, and the constant inter-tribal wars account for some, but not for all of the deterioration of the mediaeval Gaels. Christiani nomine, re pagani, as S. Bernard, without much exaggeration, says of the contemporary Irish in his life of Malachi O'Morgair.

Six or seven other bits of folklore may now be briefly mentioned. The weekdays on which the earth, sun, moon, and man were respectively created (p. 2), derived of course from Genesis. c. 1 : the introduction of wheat, rye and bees into Ireland (p. 112) : the church and tree which could not be found, though from the plain the tree was seen and the bell was heard (p. 130) : the wondrous yew of Mughna (p. 258) : the bird bewailing one saint and singing to another for a hundred and fifty years (pp. 56, 158) : the unboilable ducks of St. Colmán's church (p. 228) : the effect of an undeserved curse (p. 154) : the Devil's knees à rebours (p. 154) : the road-demon (p. 222) : the nurse of the Fians (p. 112) : the practice of giving names to a child from words that were uttered or events which occurred on or about its birthday (Féchín, p. 48, Mo-ling, p. 150, Gillán, p. 220, Molua mac ochae, p. 180, Cuimmín, p. 242). Examples in the Mabinogion of names so given are Pryderi, Math vab Mathonwy, Dylan Eilton, Llew law gyffes, Taliesin. And every scholar will remember the origin ascribed to the name 'Οδυσσεύς 'man of wrath,' in the Odyssey xix. 406-409.⁴

(c) Legal Antiquities.

The symbolical sod.—Sods, like branches, are used as symbols in the transfer of land,⁵ and in p. 13, the archangel Michael casts a sod from heaven to Maelruain as a sign that he might acquire

The four chief laws (cána) of Ireland: said (p. 210) to be: not to kill clerics, not to kill women, not to steal kine, not to work on Sunday. The sanctions are not mentioned.

The honour-price of a provincial king, p. 88. The Irish word enecland, rendered by 'honour-price,' literally means 'face-plate,' and is a compound of enech 'face,' 'honour,' and cland borrowed from the Low-Latin planta 'tabula plana, asser,' Ducange. That a gold plate the size of the face was anciently given as compensation for insult to a king has been proved by Zimmer in Kuhn's Zeitschr. xxxvi. 426.

The punishment of expulsion from the tribe is inflicted (p. 466) for murdering persons under a saint's protection. A man so expelled was called écland 'clanless,' from the negative prefix an- and cland, borrowed (like Cymr. plant) from Lat. planta.¹

The punishment of death by a hill-fire.—This, according to the legend in p. 98, was inflicted upon a perjured harlot. Her unchastity, rather than her perjury, was the crime. Thus in the Battle of Cnucha, LU. 41^b, Murni's father, finding her pregnant, told his people to burn her (asbert fria muntir a broad), and in the tale of Corc mac Lugdach (LL. 287^b, 7) it is said of the Gaels of Alba: 'it was (their) custom at first that any damsel who indulged in lust contrary to her compact should be burnt.'²

Having thus described the manuscripts on which the present edition of the Martyrology is founded: noticed its author: considered the characteristics of the language as bearing on the date of its composition: explained the metre in which it is written: given some account of its contents; and indicated the passages in the Irish prefaces and scholia which throw light on mediaeval religious practices, superstitions, folklore, and legal antiquities, I have now to express my thanks to the Council of the Henry Bradshaw Society for printing so costly and troublesome a book, and thus helping the young School of Irish Learning in its effort to promote the study of the ancient Irish language and literature. Lastly, my heartiest thanks are due to Professor Strachan and the Rev. Charles Plummer, for reading proofs and making corrections and valuable suggestions.

TWO IRISH PREFACES.

I.

THE SPECKLED BOOK.

Four things are required by every work of art, to wit, a Place and a Time, an Author and a Cause of invention.

It is worth knowing why Place should be required at the beginning, and Time in the second place, and Author in the third place, and Cause of invention in fine.

This is why Place is foremost, because it is by cities and churches that places (i.e. chief places) are estimated; and there is reverence to them.

By kings and peoples, then, Times are estimated. The second place is to these.

Author, however, in the third place, for of the Church or of the laity is the inventor of every work of art.

Cause afterwards, for cause of precedence has been found by the poets . . .

Or then it is the following of the philosophers that is there, to wit, Place foremost, for Place is corporeal. Time in the second place, for it is incorporeal. Author in the third place, for he consists of body and non-body. Cause of invention, then, sicut dixit.

Or it is the order of inventing the creation of the elements that is there. Place foremost, for 'tis on a Tuesday that the earth was made. Time in the second place, for 'tis on a Wednesday that sun and moon were made, and by them times are estimated. Author in the third place, for 'tis on a Friday that man was made. Cause, however, at the end, for 'tis on a Saturday that God blessed the elements and manifested the cause of their invention.

Now this is the time at which Oengus¹ composed the Martyrology, to wit, the time of Aed the Dignified, son of Niall the Showery,—for 'tis he that got the kingship of Ireland after Donnchad, son of Domnall,—since Oengus enters on the first prologue of the Martyrology at Donnchad's death.

Now unto Fothuth of the Canon Oengus first showed the Martyrology, when Aed had gone on the hosting of Dún Cuair in the border of Meath and Leinster, and when the clerics of Ireland had gone with him, including Conmach, St. Patrick's successor. And 'tis on that hosting that the clerics of Ireland were freed from expedition and hosting, for 'tis Fothuth of the Canon that delivered the judgment by which Ireland's churches were freed, as he said :

"The Church of living God, leave to her what is hers, let her right be apart as best it (ever) has been.

"Every true monk that is, be it on his pure conscience, for the Church to which it is due, let him work like any slave.

"Every freeman then, who is without (monastic) rule, without obedience, is allowed to go to the battle of noble Aed son of Niall.

"This is the right regulation, neither great nor small, iet every slave of God¹ serve without fault and without sin."²

So Aed the Dignified freed the Churches of Ireland and her clergy from hosting thenceforward. Fothuth then showed to Oengus the Song of the Canon and the Song of the Complaint; and they made their union there, and each of them blest the other's work of art, and they left many graces on him who should recite the Martyrology often. These truly are the graces of the Martyrology, as is (set forth) in the final prologue (the epilogue) of the Martyrology itself.³

It is worth knowing, then, in what metre the Martyrology has been composed. Easy (to say). Rindard. What is the characteristic of rinnard? Easy (to say). Six syllables in every fourth part and twelve in the half-quatrains, twenty-four in the complete quatrain, and if there be more or less it is an error. Recomarc, now, that is, disyllabic in its line-endings. 'Tis in this (metre) that Oengus composed the Martyrology, and in three kinds, namely, in smooth Rinnard (i.e. in Rinnard with two end-rhymes), and in Rinnard with three end-rhymes, and in Rinnard with four end-rhymes.

Rinnard with two end-rhymes, in the first place, is this, as Beccan son of Cula said—or it is Erurach (?) of Inis Mór :

“Good Diarmait son of Cairell : sing a chief without slackness ; no robber would turn aside¹ his slaughter, his quickness.”

And Oengus also said :

“On the calends of March, not haughty are they at prayer to them—Senán, Moinenn, Moses, David of Cell Muine.”

Now Rinnard of three end-rhymes is this :

“Fland the fiery of Tara, stern king of the land of Fotla, henceforward I opine his is the clan I would choose.”

And as Oengus also said :

“Before men’s multitudinous race let the preëminent King lead : Christ on the calends of January underwent the Law—high requirement !”

Rinnard of four end-rhymes is this, as Fothuth of the Canon said :

“Aed the Dignified of Obach, on the monsterful realm of Banba, who is better about quarrel (?) than the Hector of Ailech ?”

And as Oengus said :

“Flame of a splendid sun, apostle of virginal Erin, may Patrick, with many thousands, be a shelter to our wretchedness !”

The Place of this work of art is Cúil Bennchuir in Mag Rechet, in the territory of Húi Failgi, as regards its commencement : in Cluain Eidnech, however, the greater part of it : in Tamlachtu Librénn the completion of it all, as some say.

Its Author was Oengus son of Oengoba, son of Oiblén; of the community of Cluain Eidnech.

In the Time of Cobthach Coelbreg (it was composed).

This is the Cause. Once Oengus went to Cúil Bennchor in Mag Rechet : he saw a grave there, and all between heaven and the ground over the grave was full of angels. So he asked the priest of the church : “Who has been buried in yonder grave ?” “A wretched old man who was in the place,” says the priest. “What good used he to do ?” says Oengus. “I used not to see any special good done by him,” says the priest.

"What thing at all used he to do?" says Oengus. "He recounted the saints of the world," says the priest, "such of them as he remembered, on lying down and getting up, as is the custom of all ex-laymen."¹ "O my God of heaven," said Oengus, "whosoever should compose in poetry a song of praise for the saints, great were his guerdon therefor, since grace of yon greatness came upon the ex-layman."

; So Oengus began his Martyrology there. The middle part of it he composed in Clúain Eidnech. In Tamlachtu, however (i.e. in the kiln), it was completed, to wit, in the time of (abbot) Maelruain it was composed.

Four-and-twenty syllables in every quatrain, and if there be more or less, as aforesaid, it is an error, etc.

II.

LAUD 610.

Four things are required by every work of art, to wit, a Place, an Author, a Time and a Cause of writing. They should, then, be required by this work of art.

Place, forsooth, first for it, Cúil Bennchoir in Mag Rechet in the district of Húi Failgi, and in the kiln at Tamlachtu some of it was composed. Now its beginning was in Clúain Eidnech, in Cúil Bennchoir, and its completion in the kiln at Tamlachtu.

Now the Author is named Oengus, son of Oengoba, son of Oeblén, son of Fidrue, son of Diarmait, son of Ainmire, son of Cellar, son of Oengus, son of Natsluaig, son of Coelbad, son of Crund-badrai, son of Eochaid Coba, son of Lugaid, son of Ross, son of Imchath, son of Feidlimid, son of Cass, son of Fiachra Araide, à quo Dál n-Araide.

This, then, is the Time at which it was composed, to wit, the time of Aed the Dignified, for 'tis he that took the realm of Ireland after Donnchad, for Oengus enters on the first prologue of the Martyrology after Donnchad's death.

Now this is the Cause. Once upon a time he fared from Disert Oengusa in Munster to Cúil Bennchuir, going to get Maelruain in Tamlachtu for (his) soulfriend.² And he saw a grave in the church, and (all) over it was full of angels up to heaven. So Oengus asked the priest of the church, "who has been buried there?"

"A certain wretched ex-layman who dwelt in the place," says the priest.

"What good has he done?" says Oengus.

"Truly we used not to see," says the priest, "any good done by him, save that on lying down and rising up he recounted the saints of the world, as is the custom of ex-laymen."

"O God of heaven," says Oengus, "whoso should make a song of praise for the saints, great would be his guerdon!"

So then he began the Martyrology at once. Howbeit in Tamlachtu it was completed.

Four and twenty syllables in every quatrain, and if there be more or less, it is an error.

To Fothuth of the Canon, now, Oengus first showed the Martyrology, when he went on the hosting of Dún Cuair with Ireland's clerics along with him, including Connmach, a successor of S. Patrick; and it is on that hosting that clerics were freed from hosting, for it is Fothuth that passed the judgment whereby the churches of Ireland were freed, as he himself said:

"The Church of living God, leave to her what is hers: let her right be apart as best it has been.

"Every true monk that is, be it on his pure conscience, for the church to which it is due let him work like any slave.

"Every freeman then, who is without (monastic) rule, without obedience, is allowed to go to the battle of noble Aed son of Niall.

"This is the right regulation, neither great nor small, let every slave of God serve without fault and without sin."

Then he showed to Oengus the Song of the Canon and the Song of the Complaint, and they made their union there, and each of them blessed the other's work of art, and they left many graces on him who should recite it often.

Many, indeed, are the graces of the Martyrology, as is recounted in the last prologue (the epilogue).

That Oengus, then, was an humble, lowly servant to God, and 'tis he that used to chant his psalms thus, while he was at Disert Oengusso, to wit, fifty in the river with a withe round his neck and tied to the tree; fifty under the tree, and fifty in his cell.

Thereafter he repaired to Maelruain that he might get him as a soulfriend.

Now it is that Maelruain who decided that he would not take land in Tamlachtu until Michael (the Archangel), with whom he had a friendship, should take it ; and because of that agreement there are in Tamlachtu relics consecrated to Michael. Now once upon a time after that decision it happened that an epistle, together with a sod, was cast from heaven to Maelruain (as a token) that he might take land ; and thus then Tamlachtu has been acquired.

Afterwards Oengus, in guise of a slave, came to him, and Maelruain entrusted to Oengus the care of the (corn)kiln. He took that in hand, and this is related, that the cornblades grew through his hair by reason of the greatness of the service.¹

So it happened there that a little boy was studying his psalms with Maelruain, and once upon a time the cleric went to the church and charged the boy to learn his lesson by heart, so that he might be ready to repeat it before him. The boy, however, runs away, for he did not expect that thing, and he came to the kiln to Oengus. So Oengus asked him "what was the matter?" The boy tells him. "Come hither," says Oengus, "and put thy head on my knee, and sleep." Thus was it done. Afterwards the boy arose. Then said Oengus: "Repeat thy lesson, my son." So the boy says somewhat more than the lesson. "What is that thing, my son?" says Oengus. "I have the whole lection," says the boy. "Depart," says Oengus, "and confess not whom thou hast visited." So the boy goes and sets forth the lesson to Maelruain, and Maelruain perceived that he had somewhat more, and asked him: "Whom didst thou visit, my son?" "I know not," says the boy. "That is a lie indeed," says the cleric, "tell me quickly." "I know not," says the boy, "but I came to the kiln, and I fell asleep with my head on the knee of the kiln-man." "That is true," says Maelruain: "that man is Oengus the prophesied one!" And then he comes forth suddenly and brought only one shoe on him, and sought the kiln. "Well, O Oengus," says he, "it was not meet for thee to lie unto us, for meeter were it for us to be serving thee than thou us."

Then Maelruain brought Oengus with him with great honour, and Oengus knelt to him, and they make their union the union in heaven and on earth. So thus it was then that Oengus was revealed to Maelruain.

It is worth knowing what kind of metre the Martyrology was composed in. Easy (to say:) Rinnard. It is worth knowing also how to recognize rinnard itself. Easy (to say:) six syllables in (each of) its quarters, and twelve in (each of) its half-quatrains, and twenty-four in its complete quatrains, and if there be more or less, it is an error.

Recomarc, then, in the desinences of its lines (rechomraic, i.e. disyllabic). In the particular kind of this metre named "smooth rinnard" Oengus has composed the Martyrology. And there are three species of it, namely, "smooth rinnard," i.e. rinnard with (only) two end-rhymes, as Becan said—or it is Erurech (?) of Inis Mór.

"Good Diarmait son of Cerball, sing the chief without slackness: no robber would turn aside his slaughter, his quickness."

And as Oengus said :

"On the calends of March, not haughty are they at prayer to them, Senán, Moinenn, Moses, David of Cell Muine."

And smooth rinnard with three end-rhymes, as Mael-Maire of Fathain sang :

"Flann the fiery of Tara, stern king of the land of Fotla, henceforward I opine his is the clan I would choose."

And as Oengus said :

"Before men's multitudinous race," etc.

Rinnard with four end-rhymes, now, as Fothuth of the Canon said :

"Aed the Dignified of Obach, on the realm of monsterful Banba: who is better about quarrel(?) than the Hector of Ailech?"

As Oengus said :—

Flame of a splendid sun · apostle of virginal Erin,
Patrick with many thousands be a shelter to our wretchedness !

There is an harmonious juncture between the beginnings of the quatrains and the ends of the other (i.e. preceding) quatrains.

"Let him lead on the toilsome way before us, with the nobles of fierce Goedel's race, to the goodly delightful ethereal mansion which the tribe of high Eochaid has taken."

89. Jesus, though He has been crucified, our Lord, our champion, over every element that He had created has arisen a perfect king.

93. Though Nebuchadnezzar the red, very valiant, was king of the world, since he departed with his household his sovranty has been destroyed.

97. Not so is Old-Paul the monk, whose hermitage is gloomy: by his holy name with great grace every happy host was sained.

101. Though a sword has cut down mighty John the Baptist, in the world here he has been magnified, in God's realm he has been crowned.

105. Herod with his queen, by whom he has been slain with many paeans, neither earth nor delightful (?) heaven has received him—a hard course!

109. The holy name of Apostle Peter, every synod invokes it: to a believer it seems unworthy that he should utter Nero's name.

281. There is not in the year, O Christ, if Thou hearest, a day that a community would not come to Thee in the other world.

285. It is manifest, O Prince, O King (whose) lords are numbered, we will declare with swiftness each day's noble lights.

289. Our booklets we will search them, enquiring for every one: we will go without any neglect right forward to the year.

293. This shall be the body of our structure, timber that will not be obscure—a number of fair chapters equal to the number of the days of the year.

297. That there may not be falling to a bad understanding, every chapter swiftly will declare every day's feast.

301. The days of these great months up which this lasting sun runneth, for this splendid multitude we will not forget to acclaim them.

2. Mainchine of Airec, i.e. a river in Leix in the west of Leinster, and Airec a river et ab eo nominatur, because near it his church, named Dísert meicc Cuilinn, was situate.

Scothine. Scothíne of Tech Scothíni in Sliab Mairge. It is worth knowing why he was called Scothíne. Easy (to say), for the shortening (scothad) of the journey which he used to make, to wit, to go to Rome in one day and to come from it in another day. Vel ideo Scothíne dictus est, i.e. Once he met S. Barre (of Cork), he walking on the sea and Barre in a vessel. "What is the cause of thy walking on the sea?" says Barre. "It is not sea at all, but a plain full of clover-blossom," says Scothín, and his hand touches a flower, and he throws it to Barre in the ship, and said: "What is the cause of a vessel swimming on the plain?" At that word Barre stretches his hand into the sea, takes a salmon thereout, and flings it to Scothín. So that from that flower (scoth) he is named Scothín.

Now two maidens with pointed breasts used to lie with him every night that the battle with the Devil might be the greater for him.¹ And it was proposed to accuse him on that account. So Brénainn came to test him, and Scothín said: "Let the cleric lie in my bed to-night," saith he. So when he reached the hour of resting the girls came into the house wherein was Brénainn, with their lapfuls of glowing embers in their chasubles; and the fire burnt them not, and they spill (the embers) in front of Brénainn, and go into the bed to him. "What is this?" asks Brénainn. "Thus it is that we do every night," say the girls. They lie down with Brénainn, and nowise could he sleep with longing. "That is imperfect, O cleric," say the girls: "he who is here every night feels nothing at all. Why goest thou not, O cleric, into the tub (of cold water) if it be easier for thee?" 'Tis often that the cleric, even Scothín, visits it." "Well," says Brénainn, "it is wrong for us to make this test, for he is better than we are." Thereafter they make their union and their covenant, and they part feliciter.

stag-beetle comes out of its den after her. The nuns see it and then kill it. Thereafter she comes, and since it came not to her she asked, "Where has my fosterling gone?" she says, "and who has visited it?" "Do not rob us of heaven!" say the nuns: "'tis we that have killed it, for we knew that he was hurtful." "However that may be," saith Íte, "for that deed no nun shall ever take my succession. And I will not take (aught) from my Lord until He give me His Son out of heaven in the shape of a babe to be fostered by me." Then came towards her the angel who used to attend her. "'Tis time indeed," quoth she to him. Whereupon he said to her: "What thou askest will be given to thee." So Christ came to her in the form of a babe, and then she said :

Jesukin who is nursed by me in my little hermitage :

Leprosy (?) came against the king, against Constantine with his might, to the great city, as was meet, he was brought to Rome, to be healed. Leeches said to him that his skin's cure would be, bathing by way of his joints in the blood of three hundred innocent boys.

So that Peter and Paul came in the night after they were collected, to protect the beautiful melodious boys, and to cure the very comely king.

"Get thee under baptism," says Peter to the king, "be not afraid, because thy healing from sin shall come from the white, lasting, pure baptism.

Sylvester, the abbot of the city, go under his hand, for he is full of grace:

to believe in the trinal Trinity is a divine deed through which thou wilt reach heaven."

The apostles went forth after leaving the swift words:

The king fulfilled after them everything which they had declared.

He recognized the form of Peter of the judgments, and of Paul distinctly, he manifested, when the day came, their countenances by showing.

"Tis from that event that in the East came the magnifying of Peter the chief apostle:

20. Splendid the four I knit together etc. Enna great-grandson of Laigse, Ciarán's successor. Oengus was his name, and of Leix was he, and in Tír Ua n-Énna, on the brink of (the river) Rodba is his church i.e. Tech Óin.

Molaca, i.e. at Lann Bechair in Bregia he is. Or it may be Lochíne son of Dubdligid, i.e. of Telach min Molaga in Fermoy in Munster.
Molaga son of Dub-dliged, son of Dub-deochain, son of Dub-cuille, son of Lachtña, son of Colla, son of Cuscrad, son of Fer-cuilchi, son of Buan, son of Mog-ruith.

Moéca, now, i.e. Féchín of Fore, that is Féchín, then, he was called for this reason. He chanced, when a child, to be gnawing a bone in front of his mother, so that his mother said: "Yon is my little wee raven!" saith she. Inde Féchín 'little raven' dictus est. Mo-éca autem dictus est, i.e. for his backsliding, i.e. when Féchín was ox-herding for Ciarán of Clonmacnois his portion chanced to be left for him on the ledge (?). Thereat Féchín is angered, and he fares forth then, and leaves the church, and goes out of it eastward. That is told to Ciarán.
"After him," says Ciarán; "and if he come not willingly, let him be brought perforce," says Ciarán. They go after him. Then Féchín said that he would not come with his face before him, so he came thus, with his back before him. "A backslider is that man," quoth Ciaran. Inde etc.

Féchíne son of Caelcarna, son of Grillíne, son of Cael, son of Aed, into military service to the king of Connaught. In passing over Loch Ree westward he came to the port of Inis Clothrann. Ciarán happened to be then in the island, and he said, "Bring in the warrior, for he is a man with God's grace, and he it is that will take my coarbship after me." So Oengus is brought in. "To what place is thy road?" says Ciarán. "To the king of Connaught," says the youth. "Were it not better for thee to contract with the King of heaven and earth?" says Ciarán. "If it be proper," says the youth, "it is better." "It is," says Ciarán. Then his hair is clipt, and he is fostered in the church, and he took Ciarán's coarbship afterwards, as Ciarán prophesied.

Oenu maccu-Laigsi, a successor of Ciarán of Clúain (maccu Nois). Oengus was his name.

21. May they be one etc., i.e. Fainche daughter of Carell in the north, i.e. from Ross airthir at Lough Erne, and Fainche of Clúain cain in Eoganacht Caisil. Or Fuinche the Rough from Lough Erne, i.e. in Tuath ratha in Húi Echach Ulad. Or Féme i.e. at the Ernaide in Mag Itha she is, even Féme daughter of Cairell own-sister of Daig son of Cairell. Or Fuinche, Féme, et duae anus sunt.

This is why she was called 'Rough': for they sought to wed her to a husband, and when she heard of that she sprang into Lough Erne, and passed under water, both freshwater and sea, till she appeared at Inis Clothrann, and came to Diarmait, who asked her on what business she was bound. Then she tells him her tales, and thus was she, with shells and sea-slime cleaving to her. So that for that roughness she is called Fuinche the Rough. Said Diarmait to her: "Tis rough, O Fainche," says he.

'Tis she that was three hundred years in Loch n-Echach, till Beoán, St. Comgall's fisherman, caught her in his net, and Comgall afterwards baptized her, and she herself told her dealings to Comgall, and went to heaven, et narravit etc.

As the poet said of her :

Muirgein, 'tis a birth with triumphs, daughter of very haughty Ecchaid, went rightly past tributes,² though Jesus put (her) in a pitiful state.
She loved the estuary rather than a house, Lí-bán daughter of that man, her being under the heavy stream was trusted until she gave voice to Comgall.

By dint of his net and his tree (boat) Beoán, Comgall's fisherman, brought her after her journey in the east, so that he baptized her in his abode.

Strange the shape out of which was might, God had wrought the manifest miracle,

Fifty bishops of the Britons of Cell Muine came on their pilgrimage to Maedóc of Ferns. They came (to him) because Maedóc of Ferns was a pupil of David of Cell Muine. From David's time flesh was not brought into the refectory of Cell Muine until Maedóc's successor brought it, and hence (?) is David's strife and contumacy (?) towards the successor that brought it, and remaining in the refectory, i.e. in the abbacy of Cell Muine, with his feet not touching the ground so long as he was alive. So they came in pilgrimage to Maedóc. They were taken into the guest-house in the Lent of spring. There was brought to them for dinner fifty cakes and leeks and whey-water. "Why has this been brought ?" says the bishop. "For you to consume it," says the house-steward. "Take it away," says the bishop : "nought thereof shall be consumed until there is a pig and an ox there." The house-steward relates this (to Maedóc). "Permission," says Maedóc. It is brought to them. "'Tis well," quoth he; they eat the meat. They are there till the morrow. Maedóc salutes them. "Well," says Maedóc : "it is not too much to reprove you for eating the meat in Lent and refusing the bread." "Not from study hast thou delivered that, O Maedóc," says the bishop. "Well?" says Maedóc. "Easy (to say)," quoth the bishop, "the pig drank its mother's milk, and the ox which was brought us ate nothing save the grass of the earth. But in the cake there were three hundred and sixty five weevils (?); therefore we consumed it not."³

FEBRUARY.

1. They magnify February's calends, a shower of great, pure-coloured martyrs : Brigit the fair, strong, praiseworthy, chaste head of Erin's nuns.

2. The reception of Mary's Son in the Temple, sure, inestimable : a great host of gentle martyrs with Findech of Dorn the excellent.

3. May they always protect us fully against every misery, the fair modest host of Felix, of Symphronius !

4. Sempronius and Magnus, Gelasius thou shouldst know : Germán a noble martyr, Cúanna pious, holy.

5. Crucified was the body of Agatha, the pure champion. With bright Jesus she hath much good therefore.

NOTES.

1. Brigit. Brigit daughter of Dubthach son of Demre, son of Bresal, son of Connla, son of Art Corp, son of Cairbre Nia, son of Cormac, son of Oengus the Dumb, son of Eochaid Find Fuathnairt, son of Feidlimid Rechtmad.¹

Brigit's three eightths, to wit, her birth on the eighth (of the month) her veil on the eighteenth, her death on the twenty-eighth.

The white-one from Liffey of the slopes, daughter of Dubthach of Druim derg:

to-morrow she goes quickly, so that from her hand is Patrick's bequest.

Eight bishops came to Brigit out of Húi Briuin Cualann, i.e. from Telach na n-epscop to Loch Lemnachta beside Kildare on the north.

Brigit asked her cook, Bláthínait, whether she had food for the bishops.

Dixit illa non. Brigit was ashamed: so the angel told her to milk the cows again. The cows were milked and they filled the tubs, and they would have filled all the vessels in Leinster, so that the milk went over the vessels and made a lake thereof, unde Loch Lemnachta 'New-milk Lough' dicitur.

A robber came to Dubthach, who took a joint out of the caldron for him, and he made five pieces thereof, and gave them to Brigit to keep. But a wretched hound came to her, and she gave it the five pieces out of the caldron, and the five pieces were then found in the caldron. That was told to Dubthach, and then he gave to her and to God the land, to wit, the site of an oratory in Tuath dá Maige.

A young cleric of the community of Ferns, a foster-son of Brigit's, used to come to her with wishes. He was with her in the refectory, to partake of food. Once after coming to communion she strikes a clapper. "Well, young cleric there," says Brigit, "hast thou a soulfriend?" "I have," replied the young cleric. "Let us sing his requiem," says Brigit, "for he has died. I saw when half thy portion had gone, that thy quota was put into thy trunk, and thou without any head on thee, for thy soulfriend died, and anyone without a soulfriend is a body without a head; and eat no more till thou gettest a soulfriend."

Amra Plea etc. a convent of Brigit's which is on the brink of the sea of Wight, or the Tyrrhene (sea), and its Rule is that of Brigit's community. Et sic factum est. Brigit despatched seven persons to learn the Rule of Peter and Paul, for God did not determine that she should go. And they brought not the Rule. So she sent eastward a third time, together with her blind boy, for everything he used to hear he remembered. When they reached the sea of Wight, a storm fell upon them, so they let down their anchor, which stuck on the peak of the oratory. They cast a lot inter se as to going down, and it fell to the blind (boy). He loosed the anchor, et stetit there to the end of a year, learning the Rule, till the rest of the party came to him from Rome, and a storm fell upon them again in the same place, so they let down an anchor, and the blind boy came up from below with the Rule of Plea and with a beautiful bell, and it is the Rule of Plea that abides to-day.¹

Now Brigit was fain to have the orders of penitence conferred upon her; so she went to Bri Eile, accompanied by seven nuns, since she had heard that bishop Mel was there. When they arrived, bishop Mel was not there, but had gone into the district of the Húi Néill. So she fared forth on the morrow with Mac caille before her as a guide to Móin Faithníg. Brigit wrought so that the bog became a smooth flowery plain for them. When they drew nigh the place wherein bishop Mel was biding Brigit told Mac caille that she would take a veil on her head so that she might not come unveiled to the clerics; and that may be the veil that is commemorated here. Now after reaching the clerics a fiery column flamed from her head to the ridge of the church. Said Mac caille: "This is the famous nun of Leinster, even Brigit." "My welcome to her," quoth bishop Mel: "'tis I," quoth he, "that prophesied her in her mother's womb, and 'tis I that will confer the orders upon her."¹

Once upon a time bishop Mel came to Dubthach's house and saw Dubthach's wife in grief. So the bishop asked, "What is the matter with the woman?" "Cause of grief I have," she says, "for dearer than I am to Dubthach is the bondmaid who is washing you." "Thou hast good reason," says bishop Mel, "for thy seed will serve the seed of the bondmaid."¹

"Why have the nuns come? asked bishop Mel. "To have the orders of penitence conferred on Brigit," says Mac caille. Thereafter the orders were read out over Brigit, and bishop Mel bestowed episcopal orders upon her, and it is then that Mac caille set a veil on (her) head. Hence Brigit's successor is entitled to have episcopal orders conferred upon her.¹

So long as he was reading out the orders, thus was Brigit, with the foot of the altar in her hand; and seven churches were burnt with that foot (in one of them); and it was not burnt, sed etc.¹ Dicunt alii that in Fir tulach that church was, as bishop Mel declared:

Beloved and little the month of dear February, which comprises for us those festivals, Brigit's festival . . . Finntain's festival which I have chosen.
Save great Mary, good her fame, Mother of the Lord Jesus, no . . . under heaven has been found more wondrous than bright-white Brigit.²

descendant of the sage etc., i.e. Onchu his name: in the oratory of Relic na n-aingel (the Angels' Graveyard) in Clúain mór Maedóc he is. A good poet was he, and to this he gave heed, to collect the relics of Ireland's saints. He used not to stay in any church without some of (the saint's) relics being given to him. So that he had a great shrine of the saints' relics which he had collected. Now he went to Cluain mó Máedóc—i.e. Máedóc hua Dunlaing of Leinster, and not Máedóc of Ferns. Máedóc happened to be alive before him. “Somewhat of thy relics (cut) off thee for me, O cleric, that they may be along with these relics.” “That is hard,” says the cleric. “It is to be done, however,” says the poet. So the cleric cuts off his little-finger and gives it to the poet. Then the cleric is pained thereby, and he declared: “What thou hast collected,” says he, “will be here, and thine own relics also.” And this has been fulfilled.¹

Splendid descendant of the sage, i.e. in Clúain mór Máedóic he is, i.e. of Connaught is he. 'Tis he that collected the saints' relics in the oratory of the grave-yard of Clúain mór Máedóic.

Or Cairech Dergain, daughter of Conall the Red, son of Damíne Daim-argait (and) a sister of Énda of Aran was she. It was that Conall that severed Lough Erne from Connaught, and Dubthar from Leinster, and hunted the Ulaid over Glenn Rige eastwards; and those are Conall's three manly deeds. Now a daughter of this Conall was Cairech Dergain, and an own-brother of hers was Énda of Aran, one of the three *athlaechs*⁴ of Erin.

Etchen, i.e. in Clúain fota Baetáin in Fir bili.

Bishop Etchen from Clúain fota Baetáin aba in Fir bili is in the south of Meath, and of the Dál Mescorp of Leinster is he. It is Colum cille that went to him to have episcopal orders conferred upon him.¹ Then Colum cille sits under the tree to the west of the church, and he asks where was the cleric? "There he is," says a man there, "on the ploughing-field below." "Meseems," says Colum cille, "it is not proper for us that a ploughman should confer orders upon us. However, since we have come for it, let him be proved by us." So first, he asks Etchen for the ploughshare. He gives it to them at once, and not the less did the oxen plough. "A good man is the cleric!" say they. "Prove him still more," says Colum cille. He asks him for the outer ox. Etchen straightway bestows it on them; and bishop Etchen ordered a stag which was in the forest to do that work, and he does it forthwith.

Then Colum cille, having proved the cleric, goes to him and tells him what he had come for. "It shall be done," says the cleric. Then acerdtal orders are conferred on Colum cille, and it was episcopal orders that he wished to have. The cleric prays till the morrow. "That is a mistake, O cleric," says Colum cille, "the order that thou hast conferred upon me; and yet I will never change it so long as I am live. In lieu of that, now, no one shall ever come to this church to ave orders conferred upon him." And this is still fulfilled.

A fortnight before spring is his festival, and in the desert (hermitage?) of Cenél Dobtha in Connaught he is, i.e. in Clúain Coirpthi. An angel said this stave, and whoever recites it at the hour of death will not be a dweller in hell:

Berach and Mo-chóem, pleasant was their society:

whoever entreats them at death's lips will not go to death, i.e. hell.

16. *To the virgin Juliana.*³ Juliana was in a dungeon, (the pagans) enjoining idol-worship upon her. And at night the Devil came to her in an angel's shape, to tempt her to that worship. But a good angel came to her and said: "Knowest thou who is conversing with thee?" "I know not," she answered. "The Devil," quoth he; "and he has not deceived thee. Fasten him to thee if thou wish him to tell thee his tidings." So she fastened him, and he declared to her his wiles from the beginning of the world. "I," quoth he, "am Iafer Niger: 'tis I that tempted Adam and Eve to sin, and Cain to kill Abel. But indeed every evil that is done in the world, 'tis I that frame them all."

Juliana i.e. a Roman virgin who bound a devil with one of the hairs of her head. *At the feast of Finntan the prayerful*¹. Fifteen years and six score was the age of Finntan a-chanting psalms over the brink of a well.

Generous Finntan never consumed during his time (aught) save bread of woody barley and clayey water of clay.

I have found something to protect this host, etc.

Comgall recited this stave to Fintan when he beheld a thousand aints together with him.

Berchan sang to the stone on which Fintan had been baptized :
Wondrous is this anvil of victory which has chanced on my time !
whoso shall turn it thrice will surely come again.

Fintan of Clúain ednech, i.e. in Leix of Leinster is Clúain ednech.

18. He went etc. i.e. Colmán from Ard bó in Cenél Eogain, or in Scotland to the west of Monad. Or Colmán of Ard bó on the shore of Lough Neagh. Or Colmán Ciarda from Clúain rois on the northern shore of Lough Derg.

Colmán son of Aed, son of Gúaire, son of Amalgaid, son of Muredach, son of Cairthenn, son of Erc, son of Eochaid, son of Colla Jais.

Alii dicunt that he is Colmán son of Aed, who is in Ardbo on the shore of Lough Neagh, Vel hoc quod etc.

Moliba in Húi Echach (Iveagh) of Ulster ; or in Húi Garrchon in the Fortuatha of Leinster.

Moliba, son of Lainnedon, son of Finntan, son of Lugaid, son of Enda Bóguine, son of Conall Gulban, son of Niall of the Nine Hostages.

19. Boethíne, i.e. son of Cuana (?)² son of Caem (?), son of Énna, i.e. of Tech Baithíni in the west of Meath. Three 'Houses' of Baithíne, i.e. Tech Baithín in Meath, Tech Baithín in Tyrconnell, Tech Baithín in Airtech to the west of Cruachan of Connaught, ut est :

Four names were counted : Boethíne strong, victorious, son of Findach, (Boethíne) vigorous son of Brenan, (Boethíne) son of Alla, (Boethíne) son of Cuana.

Baithín son of Findach, son of Eochaid, son of Barr, son of Cairthenn, son of Colum, son of Lugna, son of Eogan, son of Gúaire, son of Erc, son of Lugaid, son of Conall, son of Amergen.

20. Gaius, i.e. a pope, et etc.

21. Finntan Corach i.e. on his pilgrimage he went into Connaught, and they took pledges from him to come again, alive or dead. And in Lemchoill in Tír úa nDuach and Laigis is Finntan Corach : or in Clúain Aitchen in Laigis, or in Brénainn's Clonfert he is. i.e. Cóir 'choruses' are sung at his grave, and not praise. Corach, i.e. a pledge whether alive or dead to come back again. Or the shrine wherein were his relics made turns of it (?). Or 'tis he that made adjustments (cora) in the order of the new rite, ut Sancti etc.

5. Cartach: Cartach son of Fian, son of . . . son of Cellán, son of Saiglenn (?), son of Cerb, son of Ambri (?), son of Imchad, Cartach, then, a fosterling of Ciarán of Saiger and a son of the king of the Eoganacht of Cashel, and in Cairbre úa Ciarda is his stead, i.e. Druim Fertáin, and Inis Uachtair on Loch Silenn is his also, and he is Mochutu's fosterfather, as my-Íte said :

Cartach will come to you, a man with appearance of belief, a son will be born to Carthach (i.e. Molua mac ochae) he is not at all magnified.

This then is the Cartach, Ciarán's fosterling, who was sent on a pilgrimage to Rome by Ciarán for having forgathered with a woman, of whom he begat Molua mac ochae.

Ciaran: Ciarán of Saiger³ episcopus episcoporum. Of Dál Birn was he, and Uar was the name of his well, as Patrick said :

Seek Uar, build a convent on its brink, after thirty lasting, fair years we shall meet there, (I and) thou.
Pious Ciarán, a noble coarb, senior of the saints, a jewel in rank, a marvellous birth, champion of the King, to whom great Saiger is an abode (and) peace,

Son of Lugna, a sea of vast knowledge, well he takes land—a shore that is not false—

on the day on which Doom will spread happy is everyone who shall be his fellow.

Liadaine (Ciarán's mother) was in her sleep on her bed—a saying not wrong—

when she turned her face to heaven a star fell into her mouth.⁴

Thereof was born the wondrous birth, Ciarán of Saiger, let him be mentioned by thee, and thence—a saying without pride—Luaigne declared that he was not his son.

Liadaine, daughter of Maine Cerr, son of Oengus, of the race of Lugaid son of Ith, (was) mother of Ciarán of Saiger, and he was born in Findtracht Glére, and after his birth the angels of the Lord tended him, and ranks of heaven baptized him. And 'tis in Corcu Luigdech first that in Ireland the Cross was believed in, for it is thirty years before Patrick that Ciarán took Saiger, as is said : Seek etc.

A son that is born in Tulach Tenn, pure shall be his union with us : many a monk and gentle nun after him Conall will take.

'Tis then that Ciarán foretold Conall and Fachtna of Ross Ailithir ; and it is Ciarán that left to Etersceoil kingship and leadership for ever. And 'tis he that left to the king of the Corcu-Luigde a provincial king's honour-price, because they first had the belief in the Cross, and because Cell Ciaráin was disputed (?) by them. And it is Ciarán is also the senior of the Saints of Ireland :

Ciarán son of Luaigne . . . son of Dua, son of Conall, son of Cairbre, son of Buan, son of Imbuán, . . . Lethtréan, son of Amalgaid, son of Loeguire, Birn b . . . son of Oengus of Ossory.

Wondrous, now, was the holy Ciarán of Saiger. Many cattle he had, for there were ten doors to the shed of his kine and ten stalls for every door, . . . and there were ten calves in every stall, and ten cows with every calf. So long as he was alive Ciarán consumed not any kind, small or great, of their relish (obsonium) nor of their great pròduce : but distributed it to the poor and needy of the Lord. Moreover Ciarán had fifty horses broken-in for ploughing and for tilling the earth, but it seems that of what they tilled he ate not a single cake so long as he was alive. This was his dinner every night, a little bit of barley-bread, and spring-water as drink with it, and two roots of sea-fern (?) as relish for it. Now skins of fawns was the raiment that he wore, and a wet quilt over them outside. A bolster of stone was at his head when he used to sleep.

Ten doors on the booley of my kine, ten stalls for every red-faced door, ten calves for every stall, without torment, ten foolish cows with every little fool (calf).

Of my confession to Mary's Son, though all that seems to you strange, never went in under my tooth so much as a fleshworm of the relish.

Fifty young horses¹ in my fair church in Saiger, which till the ground, on my conscience, O pleading Christ ! I never have eaten one cake of them.²

A manchet of barley and pure water, that was my dinner every time, this is the relish that I was accustomed to, two roots of sea-fern (?)

8. Senan of Inis Cathaig, crochais, i.e. Senán hanged, i.e. he fettered the monster named Cathach, from which Inis Cathaig is named.
Therefore he fettered it, since it killed the smith whose name was Nárach, and Senán brought the smith to life, that is, brought him out of the monster's belly. The monster was a foe to the smith, and Senán was a hangman to the monster.¹

Quaedam bestia etc. for the monster used to battle against a multitude out of it, multos occidebat etc. unde dicitur "he hanged the foe in a fetter," i.e. the enmity that it had in battle, he hung that in an ádrach, i.e. in a fetter, ut nec etc. Or Senán hung the foe of Nárach, i.e. a certain smith qui fuit etc. So Senán hung that which was enmity to Nárach the smith. Hic etc.

Senán son of Gerrchenn etc.

Nárach the smith, hospitality with valour, went in a boat on the sea :
over the hair of ocean he surely went away into Inis Cathaig.

When he had crossed half the water the persecuting monster took him :
his is related to Senan : 'tis then he was praying.

The cleric goes with fierceness to the edge of the green sea, he bound the monster out from him, for he was a foe of Nárach's.

He comes to Nárach—good the fight—who was safe, who was quite alive ;
the track of the monster was white, the miracle is magnified by Senán.

11. They are comrades of our God. Or "a prayer on the feast of Oiblén's son [leg. grandson], Oengus among princes" (is another reading).

i.e. Oengus son of Oingoba, son of Oiblén, of the community of Clúain Eidnech, 'tis he that composed the Martyrology in Tallaght. Oengus sang :

I have asked of my king, merciful, mighty, excellent is his heart-story—that Christ may be very indulgent to me so long as I am in the flesh.

Constantine, i.e. son of Fergus, successor of Mochutu of Rathen in Delbna Ethra in Meath, i.e. a king of Britain, who left his realm and came on his pilgrimage to Rathen in the time of Mochutu. He was also king of Scotland, and he sold the goodness of the earth for pilgrimage in order to gain heaven. So he gave himself to manual labour like any monk a-serving God ; and 'tis he that marked out the church, i.e. of Rathen, and dug its dyke, and bettered Cepach Cusantín Constantine's Plot, to the south of Rathen. Great then was his bellyful, to wit, the dinner of a hundred, 'tis this that satisfied him : so Mochutu's leavings were given to him. Mochutu sained his mouth, and (then) he used to consume only the same quantity as any (other) monk. And though his bellyful was lessened his strength was not diminished.³

Greatly, indeed, did the monks profit by his humility for the strength of a hundred was in him. Now he asked Mochutu to let him into Scotland, to visit his children and his kindred. Mochutu gave him permission, and (he went and) came again. His share of dinner had been laid up for him so long as he was in the east, and was put on a hide before him, mixed up together, both the clerics' pottage and milk and corn, and some of it had turned to worms. So he took his girdle around him and . . . (the share) towards him with his two (?) hands till it was clear to him that he had consumed it all.

Then the clerics' leavings were brought to him, and them he consumed steadily (?) and pleasantly, for the majordomo was keeping them so that nothing of the meal was left without being consumed. "Get thee to the oakwood to-morrow and ply thy wrath (on the trees)." "Why didst thou impose on me to go and receive the Sacrament at the beginning of last night as I went. Never has any unfairness come to me which I would liken to it. Every unfairness that ever befell me I cast from me with all my might. Every good that I had I made lasting (?)" Thereafter he went throughout the oakwood and clears it.

Another time he was in the dyke, doing his work. The clerics dined, and he was forgotten. Thereat he became angry, and he flung from him out of the dyke a shovelful of clay upon the skylight of the refectory, so that his ration came to him out of the platter of every monk in the house.

Thereafter Mochutu goes to seek him. The streams of sweat were then over him from the vehemence of the toil. Mochutu puts his palm under Constantine's brow and puts it (the palm) under his own brow. "Well, O cleric," says Constantine, "'tis the sweat of his own tonsure that heals every one." "Thou hast injured (thyself)," says Mochutu: "if thou hadst not said that, even the dew of thy grave would have healed every one."

In the week before Constantine's death, as they were at mass in their church, Mochutu saw Satan over Constantine's head. "What brought thee there?" says Mochutu. "This is a monk of mine," quoth Satan, "for the world is on his conscience." "Probably this is little," says Mochutu. "It is equal (?) in him, though it be little." "Well, O cleric," says Mochutu, "deliver thy confession." "I declare, my lord," says Constantine, "that on my conscience there is nothing of the world, save only that I think I should like the flagstone on which thou repeatest thy paternoster to be over my face (when I am buried)." "It shall be so indeed," says Mochutu. "And get thee, O Satan, into the pillar-stone to the south of the cell, and thou shouldst cause no hurt there save to one who shall resist the Church."

Now this is the Constantine aforesaid who obtained the three years' respite from Blathmec and Diarmait, the two sons of Aed Sláne, and from the congregation of Findén and Ciarán and Colum cille, not to expel Mochutu from Rathen. 'Tis to that same Constantine that the clerics of Leth Cuinn and the household of the children of Aed Sláne made the evil petition, after coming to ask a respite the second year ot to expel Mochutu from Rathen. "He is the same churl," says every one, "and he will not be welcome this time." "'Tis an evil petition, O youths," says Constantine, "for we were in the good plight which ye are, until we gave it up for the Lord. I had seven fortresses in my power (?), and a queen for every fortress, and gold and silver and herds of horses and kine for every fortress. I left all that I might be in virtue here for love of the Lord. If a respite were granted for me, and for Him who has sent me, there would be a reward." A lot was cast between the congregations of Finnén and Ciarán and Colum cille. "What is your hope of you would go with Diarmait to expel Mochutu?" Diarmait at first sent to expel Mochutu, and he is unable to do so, wherefore

Mochutu blessed Diarmait. Then came the turn of the community of Clonmacnois. They went to their cells. Came the turn of the community of Cluain Cuangusa at the end of Ardgall. "I will go," says their erenagh, "to expel him." Then the erenagh of Cluain Con-gussa goes to expel Mochutu. "Wilt thou expel me?" says Mochutu. "Thou shalt not be in the abbot's seat," says the cleric. "Thou shalt have neither heaven nor earth," says Mochutu; "and may thy erenagh always be a servant of wisps and mockery in assemblies and meetings!" "Woe to him who takes thee and by whom thou art taken!" says the prior of Cell ached. "A blessing," says Mochutu; "and with thee will be the dignity of thy church." "Take him away," says the sub-erenagh of Clonmacnois: "let not the fellow delay, a wordy log (?) in the church." "May neither heaven nor earth be thine," says Mochutu, "and cold and hunger carry off thy successor always!" "'Tis a great pity what ye do," says the prior of Durrow. "'Tis thou (says Mochutu) who will be prior and erenagh always in thy place." "Drag him down!" says the erenagh of Durrow. "Hatred of thy congregation upon thee (says Mochutu), and on thy successor always! and may a singer be always needed to teach thee in meeting and to teach thy successor."

Then he turned to the community of Clonard, and cursed a part of them and blessed another part.

Blathmec himself went up to him, and Cronan the Red, Ciaran's successor. "Why have ye come?" says Mochutu. "To expel thee," says Blathmec. "Thou shalt not," says Mochutu. "Thou shalt not be in the abbot's seat against him (?)" quoth he. "Then I will expel thee from the seat in which thou art, and I will rob thee of heaven and earth, so that neither king nor crown-prince shall be from thee."

12. Gregory of Rome, i.e. of the Children of Dega was he, and abbot of Rome. And 'tis he that bequeathed his body in a case on the river Tiber, with an ounce of gold on its breast, i.e. the ounce of virginity, and God sent it to Arann, and from it the strand on which it came is named, and therein are his relics, as Fercertne the poet of 'ú-róí prophesied, saying, "Judgment will be born," etc.

Descendant of Dega, son of Sen, Gregory of Ardmáil, abbot of Rome of full Latium, goes into Erin, for it is in his share.

For Erin the noble island wherein keen Gregory will be chief of the pure fair Góedil, the race of bright Góedel that branches, though severe, I will say.¹

Eugenia. Eugenia daughter of Philip. By command of the emperor Commodus, Philip went to take the kingship of Alexandria and Egypt, and brought with him his wife, Claudia, his two sons, Sergius and Habitus, and his daughter Eugenia, and her two eunuchs, Protas and Iacinthus, along with her. It happened one day that she and her eunuchs were passing by the monastery of Edeb (?), and this is what the monks were then chanting: "The gods of the heathen are demons, but the Lord hath made the heavens." Said she: "Sad it is for us if it is demons whom we worship. Truly I will go and offer myself to the God whom these adore." So she goes and assumes a man's form, for there were no women in the monastery, and was baptized. Elinus was the name of the bishop who catechised and baptized her in Egypt. Steren vero, etc. Such was her choiceness that after the death of the head of the monks she was appointed to the headship of the monastery. And a harlot tempted Eugenia to lie with her. But when thought was gotten from her the harlot said that Eugenia had outraged her. So then came the king of the country to retaliate upon her, and he was her father, Philip. Whereupon she called him to her apart, and she said to him: "Hadst thou a daughter?" "I had," he answered, "and I know not her fate." Then the king recognises her, and thus she was saved and the monastery. Thereafter a hill-fire was made for the harlot. Ipsa est, etc.²

APRIL.

1. April's calends ennable Ambrose, with much of purity: he takes what is greater happiness, one of Mary's feasts.

2. The great host of Amphianus, from which the Devil was sorrowful, passed, after a hard battle, into the noble happy peace.

3. The host of noble Evagrius has escaped by ways of tribulations, a forty of kings with two fair hundreds.

4. Sing pious Tigernach, for Christ's sake he vanquished every lust—out of whom burst a stream of knowledge, (Tigernach) of beautiful Clúain Euis. (Clones.)

5. On the great feast of Béccán mac Cula, with the victory of piety, Patrick's excellent baptism has been kindled in Ireland.

6. Herenius the bishop, whose thousands are great, was a fair virginal bush in the vine of the white Lord.

7. Fínan the squinting, of Cenn Etig, around whom is much of clamour: a champion of Christ was Cainde, from wolf-haunted Sliab Bledmae.

8. The death of Januarius the martyr: great was the tower of his temple: not reproached by his community has been Cennfaelad abbot of Bangor.

9. The triumph of seven innocent holy virgins, in every household it should be told, whose blood it is that does not perish on the fair feast of Quadratus.

10. The cross of Apollonius the presbyter---for Christ's sake treasures are acquired (?)— from Ross Eo—happy name!
Cuannae royal, excellent.

What has brought thee, O Cuachán, over Muadán's hair (i.e. from below) ?

(An angel said)

"Thy piety and thy devotion and Guaire's generosity."

Tigernach's mother was Darfraich. "Tis to her that Cechtamair of Druim Dubain said, after being unable to split the tree while building her oratory :

"Darfraich ! O mother of holy Tigernach !

Thus, then, they were slain in the refectory, a tetrad and fifty, this is the number that went to martyrdom together with Donnan.

Donnán of Eig, i.e. Egha is the name of a river in Scotland. Or it is an island, and 'tis there is Donnán, or in Caithness in the north of Scotland, and there holy Donnán died with his community, to wit, fifty-five (leg. 52 in number). 'Tis this Donnán that went to Colum cille to get him for a soulfriend, and Colum cille said to him, "I will only be soulfriend," quoth he, "to folk of white martyrdom, i.e. I will not be(thy) soulfriend, for thou and the whole of thy community with thee will go to red martyrdom." And this was fulfilled. Then Donnán with his community goes into Galloway and takes up his abode where the queen of the country's sheep used to be. That is told to the queen. "Let them all be killed," she says. "That is not pious," says every one. So men come to them to slay them. The cleric was then at mass. "Grant us a respite till the mass ends," says Donnán. "It will be granted," they say. The whole number¹ is at once slain.

Ega, i.e. the proper name of a place. 'Tis there that Donnán suffered: the name of a fountain in All-Saxain,² or in Caithness, and there Donnán, cum sua familia, fifty-four (in number), passus est.

of Roscrea, i.e. in the Éili of Munster.

29. Coningen i.i. Fiachra Coningen, i.e. a great nail was on him like a wolf's claw.

Coningen, fair was his grasp: a wolf's claw on him as regards its length.

Rónán of Liath(ross), let it be read by us, Ross úane is the name of his church.

Or of the Coningni (?) of Mag Femin was he.

Or Coningen, i.e. Condingen, i.e. a man of the community of Mochtu of Lismore in the Dési of Munster he is, and of the Coningnig, a tribe to the north of Slíab Cua, and at Ard Finnáin he is. Sed uerius est hoc, i.e. Coningen was by some chance with a she-wolf, sucking, with her cubs, milk from her udders;¹ and Coach of Cell Findmuine among the Húi Finechglais in Leinster was so called, and 'tis she that was a pupil of Mac táil of Cell culinn, and on account of her the clerics of Leinster reviled him.

Fiachra: of Mochtu's community was he.

30. Rónán, i.e. of Rónán of green Liathros, i.e. at Senbuaille in Conailli Murthemne he is, vel in alio loco. Or Rónán l. r., i.e. of Liathros, i.e. unum nomen. Or Ronan of Léthros from us, i.e. out of Ireland is he. Huanni, i.e. name of a river. Rónan etc.

cross of Quirinus, i.e. a pope.

6. A man who has written without stint fair stories of Christ crucified : venerated by princes is the great nativity of Matthew the magnified.

7. My Cuaróct with Breccán, two champions who are purest,
they loved Christ who is dearest, in Daire Echdromma.

8. Victor and Maxim, for Christ they have brought themselves : for affection towards the King whom they have loved they bathed them in their blood.

9. The great manifestation of Michael ; to the world it was a proven story : the passion of

16. of Brénann, i.e. son of Findlug, grandson of Alta of Ciarraige Luachra, i.e. in Húi Mac Caille, in Clonfert. Brenaind son of Findlug, son of Olchu, son of Alta, son of Ogaman, son of Fidchuire, son of Delbra, son of Eunne, son of Uasalec (?), son of Ard oman, son of Modta, son of Ciar, son of Fergus.

Brénaind son of Findlug, son of Elchu, son of Aelta, of the Ciarraige Luachra of Alltraige Caille. At the same time with Oengus son of Natfráich, king of Munster, was he born. It is his mother who beheld the vision. It seemed to her that an ingot of gold fell into her bosom, and her two paps flamed on her breast. Findlug related that vision to his soul-friend, bishop Erc son of Ogaman, son of Fidach. And Erc said that a marvellous child would be born of the woman who beheld the vision. Then bishop Erc saw this : it seemed to him that a glow of fire was over the district of Altraige, and that it was full of angels from heaven to the ground. Bishop Erc went on the morrow to Findlug's house and took the boy into his bosom, and put his protection and his union to him. That is the night whereon Becc mac Dé the prophet chanced to be in the house of Mac Ardae son of Fidach, king of Ciarraige Luachra. The king asked him : "What seest thou for us to-night, O Becc ?" "I see" (says Becc) "that thy king is born between thee in the west and the sea." "Truly," says Mac Ardae, "we know of no free race between us and the sea that would have a right to reign over us." Becc replied : "The son that is born to Findlug to-night, he will be thy king for ever." Now a swift rain came from the source of the Jordan and dropt on Brénainn at the time of his baptism. Wherefore he was called Brendinus, that is, a rain (broen) swift (dian) from above (di-anuas) ; or at the time (denus) of his baptism.¹

JUNE.

1. Give heed to Thecla's feast, which has a right for us to sing it, with a vast noble host in front of the calends of June.

2. Erasmus the bishop, a splendid flame, with vigorous ardour, took unto Christ a triumphant train, three hundred praiseworthy thousands.

3. A soldier of Christ into the border of Erin, a high name over the sea's wave : Coemgen the chaste, fair warrior, in the Glen of two broad loughs. (Glendalough.)

4. Apollinaris went to God's kingdom straightway, with his virginal train, at the translation of Martinus.

5. The martyrdom of Marcianus, many triumphs magnified it, one of a mighty man, a goodly number, another of a virginal maiden.

6. The perfect suffering of Amantius, ('tis) an evil deed if thou conceal it. Mael-aithgin with pure goodness went under ground to a shelter.

7. The calling of Paul the martyr, after a great deed with starkness. The feast of Colomb without evil, the great descendant of Artae.

8. The reception of holy Job after triumph and blood-less battle; the feast of Medrán, a great solace; the feast of Murchú with great grace.

9. May they convoy us to the eternal Kingdom, wherein is ever a lucid light, Baethíne high, angelical, Colomb Cille the lustrous !

10. They meet on the same road: happy is he who found them, the chief feast of Mark —a conspicuous diadem—with the triumphant feast of Barnabas.

Cremthann was his original name,¹ Colum pro simplicitate dictus est, cille ‘of the church,’ for his coming from the church, i.e. from Telach Dubglaisse in Tír Lugdach, quia etc.

‘Tis that Colum cille who from his youth gave vast love to Christ. Once upon a time comes an angel from heaven —Axal was the name of the angel that used to come to Colum cille, quasi *Auxil, ab auxilio*²— This he said to Colum cille: “O Colum cille, take virginity around thee,” says the angel. “I will not take it,” says Colum cille, “until a reward therefor be given to me.” “What reward dost thou demand?” says the angel. “I declare,” says Colum cille, “it is not one reward, but four.” “Say then,” says the angel. “I will say,” answers Colum cille; “death in repentance and death of hunger, and death in youth—for bodies become hideous through old age” “That and more is given to thee,” says the angel: “thou wilt be a chief prophet of heaven and earth.” That was fulfilled for him. He went into pilgrimage: he was young when he was dead, and he died of hunger: it was, however, voluntary hunger, and this was the cause of that hunger, i.e.,

Once he went round the graveyard in Iona and he saw an old woman cutting nettles to make broth thereof. “Why art thou doing that, thou poor little thing?” says Colum cille. “O darling Father,” she answered, “I have a single cow and she has not yet borne a calf, and I am expecting it; and this (broth) is what serves me for a long time back.” Colum cille then determines that nettle-broth should serve him more for ever, dicens “Since in expectation of the one uncertain cow one is in this great hunger, it were meet for us though great were the hunger wherein we should be. For better is what we expect certainly, regnum perenne.” So he said to his servant, “Give thou to me every day nettle-broth without butter or milk along with it.” “It shall be done,” says the cook. He bores the mixing-stick of the broth so that it became a pipe, and through the pipe butter was poured and mixed with the broth. The folk of the monastery notice the goodly appearance of the cleric and talk of it among themselves. That is revealed to him, and this he said: “May your successors be always murmuring! Well then,” says he to the servant, “what dost thou put for me every night into the broth?” “It is done in thy presence,” says the lad: “unless it came out of the hand or out of the stick with which the broth is mixed, I know of naught else herein save broth alone.” (The trick) is revealed to the cleric. “Happiness, and a goodly countenance for ever,” says he, “to thy successor!” And this is fulfilled.

‘Tis then that Báithín related to him the noteworthy vision, to wit, three thrones were seen by him in heaven, namely, a throne of gold and a throne of silver and a throne of glass. “That is clear,” says Colum cille. “Ciarán son of the wright has the throne of gold on account of his honour and because of his hospitality. Thou thyself, O Báithín, hast the throne of silver because of the purity and lustre of thy devotion. The throne of glass is mine, for though my devotion is fair, I am often frail and I am carnal.”³ a high champion of the king, a strong, i.e. besides being a champion of the (heavenly) King he is a strong brother of ours; and according to that Moling alone is in the stave. Vel sic quod uerius, for it is in the commentary on the Martyrology which from the time of the saints is in Armagh, i.e. comling (?) who is a champion of the King along with him, and superiority to the King sic. Velut sic, ut episcopus sapit ‘the bush of gold,’ i.e. Moling, with a king’s champion who was a brother of his, together with Moling, and superiority to Moling according to that.

Once as Moling was in the Táiden, he saw Mael-doburchon son of Cellach coming towards him, seeking his horses. The guesthouse of multitudes was Mael-doburchon’s house. He was especially good to Moling because Moling was his soul-friend. He salutes Moling. “We are on a search, O cleric,” says Mael-doburchon. “On a search for Christ that is,” says Moling. “Awful is that deed which the Jews have done, crucifying Christ.” “We would spend all our might in saving Him,” says Mael-doburchon. Moling then betakes himself (i.e. goes) into the midst of a thornbrake and sets his cowl on a pole in the midst of the brake. “Supposing Christ were the cowl, how wouldest thou rescue him?” Mael-doburchon cast his raiment from him, and with his hands he put the brake past him till he reached the cowl, so that it was between his arms. “That is the way I would rescue Christ,” says Mael-doburchon; and there were streams of blood out of his fingers. “Wondrous is that!” says Moling: “thou shalt have the guerdon thereof with Christ: the men of hell will never spill blood from thee, and devils will never contend for thy soul. Go thou monk yonder,” says Moling to the rag¹ for which Mael-doburchon was seeking. The rag gets forward and lays itself on the haunches of the steed in the place where he was. So Mael-doburchon took it with his horses to his house.

Said Moling to Adamnán in framing the law:²

It is meet for you if ye visit him, Máel-doburchon son of Cellach, that you leave your blessing on Máel-doborchon’s house.

Moling of Luachair a fosterling of Máedóc of Ferns. From Máedóc he got Tech Moling. Of the Húi Dega móir of Leinster was he. Now they used to be carried past him over the Garb east and west between Leinster and Ossory. “My conscience,” says he, “it seems to me pleasant and harmonious when the is brought over the Garb eastward. Horror seizes me when it is brought over it westward.” Great tribulation had he in founding the Táiden, from devils and packs of wolves and evil men crossing him.

I have brought (saith he) a branch from Dubglas to my house for dread of final death :

set ye its end under heavy waves against the trees of Findmas (?)

I have brought a branch, saith he, to my house for fear of final death :
it will protect many souls on the road of star-beautiful heaven.

Once as he was praying in his church he saw a youth coming in to him. Purple raiment he wore and a distinguished form had he. "That is well, O cleric," says he. "Amen," says Moling. "Why dost thou not salute me?" says the youth. "Who art thou?" says Moling. "I am Christ the Son of God," he answers. "I know not that," says Moling. "When Christ used to go to converse with God's servants, not in purple, nor royally, used he to go, but in the shapes of the wretched, to wit, of the sick and of the leper Christ was wont to be." "Is it unbelief thou hast in me?" says the youth ; "whom dost thou suppose to be here?" "I suppose," says Moling, "that it is the Devil for my hurt." "Ill for thee is the unbelief," says the youth. "Well," says Moling, "here is thy successor, the Gospel of Christ," raising the gospel. "Do not raise it, O cleric," saith the Devil : "likelier it is I whom thou thinkest. I am the man of tribulations." "Wherefore hast thou come?" says Moling. "That thou mayst bestow thy blessing upon me." "I will not bestow it," says Moling, "for thou dost not deserve it. Not the better (wouldst thou be). What good would it be to thee?" asks Moling. "If" (says the Devil) "thou shouldst go into a tub of honey and bathe therein with thy raiment (on), its odour would remain upon thee unless thy raiment should be washen." "Why does that seem (good) to thee?" asks Moling. "Because, though thy blessing do nought else to me, its good luck and its goodness and its blossom will be on me externally." "Thou shalt not have it," says Moling, "for thou leservest it not." "Well," says the Devil, "bestow the full of a curse upon me." "What good (were that) to thee?" asks Moling. "Easy o say, O cleric," he answers : "the mouth from which the curse on me shall come, its venom and its hurt will be against thee."¹ "Go," says Moling, "thou hast no right to a blessing." "Better were it for me," says he, "that I had. How shall I earn it?" "By service to God," says Moling. "Woe is me," says the Devil, "I cannot bring it." "Even a rifle of study." "Thy study is not greater,² and it helps me not." "Fasting then," says Moling. "I am fasting since the beginning of the world, and not the better am I." "To make genuflexion," says Moling. "I cannot bend down forward, for backwards are my knees."³ "Go forth," says Moling : "I am unable to teach thee or to save thee." hereof said the Devil :

He is pure gold, he is the sky round the sun, he is a vessel of silver with wine

He is an angel, he is holy wisdom, whosoever doth the will of the King.

He is a bird round which a trap closes, he is a leaky ship in perilous danger, he is an empty vessel, a withered tree, who doth not the will of the King above.

He is a fragrant branch with its blossom, he is a vessel full of honey, he is a precious stone with its goodness (who so) doth the will of the Son of God of heaven.

He is a blind nut that is not (?) he is a stinking rottenness, a withered tree, he is a branch of a crab-apple without blossom whoever doth not the will of the King.

(Whoso) doth the will of the Son of God of heaven is a brilliant sun round which is summer, is a dais of God of heaven, is a pure crystalline vessel.

He is a race-horse over a smooth plain, the man that strives after the kingdom of great God ;

he is a chariot that is seen under a king that bears off victories

He is a sun that warms holy heaven, a man for whom the great King is thankful, he is a temple prosperous, noble, he is a holy shrine which gold bedecks.

He is an altar on which wine is dealt, round which a multitude of melodies is sung, he is a cleansed chalice with liquor, he is fair white-bronze, he is gold.

NOTES.

1. Aaron's death, i.e. Aaron died on Mount Hor.

Thaddaeus, i.e. qui etc.

2. of Damasus, i.e. bishop of Rome.

of Processus . . . of Martinianus, who suffered in Rome.

3. Thomas' translation, i.e. he was transferred, i.e. the bringing of him from India to Edessa, a city beside the river Euphrates.

Tartinne, i.e. a virgin, from Cell aird in Húi Garchon in the west of Leinster.

4. Martin's good great ordination, i.e. his ordination into the bishopric of Tours.

Findbarr of Inis Teimle, between Húi Censelaig and the Déssi of Munster. of Inis Doimle, there he is in Inis Doimle or Temle, i.e. in darkness (temel) was the island until there came two sons of Aed, namely Findbarr and Barrfind, two sons of Aed of Áth cláith, son of Dállan, son of Liathán, son of Briun, son of Eogan, son of Brecc, son of Art cuirp, son of Fiacha Suigde.

Here he and Brigit meet (in their pedigrees).²

5. Agatho, i.e. in Lombardy is Agatho, etc.

6. Moninne, i.e. Moninne of Slíab Cuilinn, who was previously named Darerca. Or Sárbole was her name previously. But a certain dumb poet fasted at her that his speech might come to him. And this was the first thing he said, i.e. nín nín. Hence the nun was called Mo-ninna, and the poet Niníne éces. Moninne quasi Monanna, the nuns used to call her.³

A sister of Mary, i.e. she was a virgin like Mary.

Nine score years together, according to rule without fear, without folly, without fault, without error, it was Moninne's age.

Moninne was said of her, of the devout holy virgin with beauty : Monanna, 'tis a gracious name the girls used to say.

Or from this the name was said, of the nun for her invocation from Ninnén the poet—the better thereof—who besought her for her prayer.

I will tell it out to you her own name usually,
Darerca for her time clave to her till she took it, the agnomen.

Moninne, daughter of Mochta son of Lilach, son of Lugaid, son of Ross, son of Imchath, son of Feidlimid, son of Cass, son of Fiacha Araide.

7. of Parmenius, i.e. a presbyter etc. Parmenius, smeared with honey, who was on fiery gridirons.

18. of the queen i.e. Christina : from her is named Lacus Christinae, near Rome, the distance of a journey of three ostents.¹ Or Christina : this is a story of the Romans, that by her was made one causeway from Rome to Mount Garganus. Thus did this happen : a certain man, to wit, a king, gave vast love to her, but she said that she would not forgather with him for anything unless he would help in doing yon great (deed of) lowliness. Thus is it done, and through the king's help she offered (to God) the causeway, and through that deed the divine grace comes on himself, and he serves the Lord, and he and Christina did not forgather.²

Or Daríne nomen matris eius, i.e. at Clár Dairi móir in Mag Airb is Daríne's son, and Natail from Cell manach in the west of Ossory, on the same day with him. i.e. from Daire móir meic Darane in Mag Airb he is, and Rathail (sic) from Cell manach in the west of Ossory in uno die: from Daire móir meic Darans between Ossory and Éle of Munster.

Colmán son of Daríne, then, i.e. Daríne was sister of Colmán's mother, and he was her fosterling. Now Sanct, Daríne's sister, was Colmán's mother. Daríne was barren, but Sanct was prolific. So Daríne asked for Colmán at once after his birth. To her then Sanct gives him, so that Daríne fostered him, and hence he is called Colmán son of Daríne; and he is at Daire móir in Mag Airb between Ossory and Éle.⁵

Stephen's noble body, i.e. here was discovered³ the body of Stephen⁴ the first martyr of the New Testament, et sic etc.

Blithe will he be etc. Molua, son of ochae, i.e. 'armpit,' from Clúair ferta Molua, and from Sláib Bladma and from Druim Snechta in Fernmag, et in aliis locis. 'Molua son of ochae', thus did he get his name. Comgall of Bennchor once chanced to be wending his way with his household. It happened that they heard somewhat, the cries of the infant in the tussock of rushes. Vel Comgall ambulans etc. He (one of Comgall's monks) gives his kick to the rush-brake, and sees a babe in the midst of it, and brings it in his armpit. Comgall asked him: "What hast thou found?" He answered, "I have found a babe." "What didst thou with it?" says Comgall. "I gave my kick to it," says the monk, "and I have brought it in my armpit." "This shall be its name," says Comgall, "My-kick son of armpit," i.e. for its being found in the rushry, or for the kick which the monk gave to the brake of rushes in which it was. (Mac ochae, i.e. son of armpit, for apud ueteres 'armpit' is called ochae.) Thereafter then it was fostered by Comgall.

'Son of ochae', i.e. son of armpit, for this is the story: when Comgall of Bennchor was travelling his road he saw a service of angels (coming) to a bank of rushes which was a little distance from the road. So he said to one of his community: "Go and see what is in yon bank of rushes." The man went and gave a kick at the bank, and beholds a babe in the midst of it, and brings it in his armpit. Then Comgall asked him: "What didst thou find?" The man said: "I found a little babe." Said Comgall: "What hast thou done to it?" He replied, "I gave my kick at it, and I have brought it under my armpit," etc.

Now it came to pass, when Molua was a student, Comgall and he came cum caeteris to the church. It is manifested to Comgall that all who were therein were without a head on anyone of them. "So Comgall sained their eyes, and they see similiter. They marvel greatly. "Hence is this," says Comgall: "my soulfriend has died, and I am headless, and ye, too, are headless, for a man without a soulfriend is a body without a head." "And what are your counsels besides?" "Here is mine for thee," says Molua: "take Christ's gospel to thee, and let someone uplift it before thee, and kneel to it till thou gettest a soulfriend out of it." "Go thou for it," says Comgall, "for thou art the youngest." So he goes and fetches a gospel. Comgall looked at him and said: "Since in thy hand it happens to be, 'tis thou shalt be my soulfriend." So that it is his fosterling, who was soulfriend to him; and Comgall saw a head on everyone within, and they saw similiter.

Now 'tis Molua that was soulfriend to David of Cell Muine, and to Cóemóc and to Máedóc and to Comgall, ut quidam dixit:

Molua was soulfriend to David over the slow . . . sea, and to Cóemóc and to Máedóc and to Comgall.

Now this is that Molua who never killed a bird or any other living thing, and Máel-anfaid saw the bird bewailing him. Of him too Mithiden, my-Íta's angel, gave the testimony when my-Íta was reproaching him for his forgetfulness (during) three days in not bringing her food; for her portion used to be brought to her from heaven every noon. So the angel said :

The men of heaven, the men of earth--mighty the gloom—
it seemed to them that Lugaid's death was Doomsday.

Never came, never will come, never will reach (heaven) and after they had risen out of their sleep, as it seemed to them, one of them went out through the door of the cave to buy food, and thereafter he produced his money in ciuitate. "Get out, O man," say they: "what thou hast is ancient money: it will not be taken here." "What's that?" says he: "what makes ancient money of it?" "In the time of Decius," they answer, "it was coined; and that is a hundred and fifty-five years ago, and there is now a Christian king, even Constantine son of Helena." Mochtae's tooth, no empty fame, three hundred years, lasting his tribute, without a word of error over it up, without a bit of relish over it down.

three hundred priests, two hundred bishops along with him.

Eighty psalm-singing nobles his household—vastness of courses—without ploughing, or reaping, or drying, without work save only study.

Though he be cunning at carving cold stones, though he be skilled at plying an axe,

though sweet his chant at songs, I have heard that he who does not study is dull.

Dear John's decapitation in great Macerunda,³

Sebaste—the course is written—the name of the village wherein he was buried.

If he has been struck, if he has been slain, if he has been axed—mighty the cause—this like—pleasant the jewel—will never be on Banba's shore.

The world's women, save a few of them, burn in the fire of Doom : to speak to them is unmeet after the murder of John.

In vengeance for the killing of John comes the Besom out of Fanait⁴ to expurgate Ireland at the end of the world, as Aileran of the Wisdom foretold, and Colum cille, i.e. at terce precisely will come the Besom out of Fanait, ut dixit Colum cille : "Like the grazing of two horses in a yoke will be the diligence with which it will cleanse Erin."

Of the Besom Aileran said : "Two alehouses shall be in one garth side by side. He who shall go out of one house into the other will find no one before him alive in the house he will enter, and no one alive in the house from which he will go. Such will be the swiftness with which the Besom shall go out of Fanait."

Riagail said : "Three days and three nights and a year will this plague be in Ireland. When a boat on Loch Rudraigí shall be clearly seen from the door of the refectory, then comes the Besom out of Fanait."

A Tuesday in spring, now, is the day of the week on which the Besom will come in vengeance for John's passion, as Moling said : On John's festival will come the onslaught, which will search Ireland from the south-east,

Quies Colmán cum omnibus patribus, who thrice made wine of well-water, i.e. the first time for Colum cille: the second time for Féchine of Fore, when he gave his eyes to him:² the third time for Rúadán of Lorrha. And that well is in darkness behind Rúadán's flagstone east in his graveyard; and everyone on whom water comes in that graveyard his soul is not punished.

White-leg, i.e. great bright hair through his legs, or bright-white were his legs. He was a master of study and jurisprudence and history and poetry. To him once came Colum cille (as a guest), and he hid his books from the latter, and Colum cille left a (banning) word on his books, i.e. "May that as to which thou shovest inhospitality be of no profit after thee!" And this has been fulfilled, for still the books remain and no one studies them.

When Lon was dead the book-satchels that were in the cell where Colum cille dwelt fall. All are silent at that noisy shaking of the books.³ Then said Colum cille: "Longarad," saith he, "the master of every art in Ossory, has just now died." "May it be long till that comes true!" says Báithíne. "Disbelief (be) in thy successor!" says Colum cille. Then he made this stave:

Dead is Lon of Cell Garad, great the misfortune!
for Ireland over her border 'tis ruin of study and schools.

son of Cnes, i.e. Cnes of Dál Cethirn was his mother, i.e. Conchaide's daughter, et ab ea nominatus est Mac nissi, i.e. (son) of Cnes. Thus in LL. 371c: This is said, that on the night of Lon-garad's death Ireland's book-satchels and her gospels and her books of instruction fell from their shelves, as if they understood that never would there come any one like Lon-garad.

Ultan quasi altan ‘razor,’ for his keenness and sharpness in miracles and marvels. He used to be called ‘the cleric of the children,’ for after the (plague called) Buide Connail every babe without maintenance was brought to Ultan, so that often fifty, or a hundred-and-fifty, of them were with him at the same time, and he himself used to feed them, i.e. the children of the women whom the Buide Connail had killed. This is what Ultan used to do, to cut off the cows’ teats . . . and pour milk into them, and the babes a-playing around him.

Thus then he used to wend, with his gospel on his back, (hanging) without any strap to it!

At that time Diarmait son of Cerball was king of Ireland. There happened (to come) a vast seafleet (of foreigners), which filled most of Erin’s estuaries. Great fear affects Diarmait, and then he said : “Yon ‘cleric of the children,’ who wends with his gospel on his back and no strap to it, in him let us put our trust that the plague may be taken from us.” So envoys are sent from Diarmait to Ultan. Then was Ultan feeding the children when the messengers arrived, and they tell him their errands. “That is a shame,” says Ultan, “that ye did not leave me alone till my right hand was free. My hand that is free, i.e. the left hand, I will raise it against these ships. But if it were my right hand no foreigner would ever invade Ireland.” So that hence is (the proverb) “Ultan’s left hand against the evil !”

Thus F: Then was Ultan feeding certain children, with a bit of porridge in his lips and some of it on his finger, when the king’s gillie arrived. Ultan spake not to the gillie, but uplifted his left hand. Then the gillie repaired to the king and told this to him, and the king understood that the cleric had raised his left hand in order to expel the fleet. Wherefore from that time to this is (the proverb) ‘Ultan’s left hand against every evil.’

The feeding of his fosterlings by Ultan
He wrecked, destroyed, stranded thrice fifty ships with his left hand.
Had it been the right hand that noble Ultan raised against them from us
hence

No foreigner would ever have come here or there into the land of Erin.

Moninne sang :

Not from a blow on anyone’s face are all the clerics red :
is a little thing that whitens the visage of Ultan great-grandson of Conchobar.

It is great labour to strive for the height in the valley :
Strive for perfection with the Son of God, this is what would make the cheeks white.

Darerca my mother, she was not a bad woman,³

Beóán the wright my father, of Latharna Molt.

In the house of the son of the wright he was reared.

Then when the proper time (?) came he asked his father to give him something by which he might effect his learning, for he meditated going to Clonard to Finnén, the tutor of Erin's saints, in order to learn. Said Beóán : " Go through the herds," quoth he, " and what will follow thee take." A dun cow follows him, and that became 'Ciarán's Dun.' Twelve measures (of milk) it used to yield at the same time, i.e. a measure for each of the twelve apostles of Ireland.⁴

Now when Ciarán was beginning to make a gospel with Finnén, Colum cille came to Finnén to study. " Dost thou deem it pious (?) to make a gospel?" says Finnén to him, " for every one is making it. Ciarán alone has the book of it." " It is pious," says Colum cille, " and I will go to Ciarán." He goes accordingly. Ciarán was then preparing his Gospel lesson, and this especially is what he said : " Whatsoever ye wish men to do unto you, that do ye unto them." Colum cille enters the hut. " Dost thou share the book with me?" says Colum cille. " It is not easy (says Ciarán) for me to refuse it, since that which we have just said is against us unless we give it. So let the book with (my) blessing, be thine," says Ciarán. " Half of Ireland to thee!" says Colum cille.

Now when Ciarán finished his work, he asked Finnén, "What shall be done?" "Let it be with what follows (thee)," says Finnén. Thereafter she (the dun cow) follows Ciarán, so that her hide is the goodly relic which is called 'the Hide of Ciarán's Dun.'

Three and thirty years had Ciarán completed when he died. Ireland's saints had fasted for his death, for the whole of Ireland would have been his had not that been done. Odrán of Letracha Odráin and Mac cuillinn of Lusk went to relate to him for what they had fasted. "Ye have permission . . . to go to sain the air before us," says Ciarán, "and what ye seek will be given to you." So then he composed the verses beginning :—

Stay for me, O King of splendid heaven.¹

Cutting short Ciarán's life, and sending Colum cille over sea, and expelling Mochutu from Rathen, those are the three bad stories of the saints of Erin. The three worst counsels that were done through the counsel of the saints, i.e. cutting short Ciarán's life, and banishing Colum cille, and putting Mochutu out of Rathen.²

Now Patrick had foretold him (Ciarán) three score years before his birth. Comlach, Patrick's leper,³ went oversea to collect saints' relics and he brought the relics to the place where Bothcraind⁴ is to-day. A great elm-tree was there then with a hollow in it. The book-satchel is put into the hollow and the satchel in which were the relics. On the morrow they arise. Though they were quick, they saw neither the hollow nor the satchel. They fall to cutting the tree and nothing can they do to it, for every chip which they struck from it would come again upon it. Thereafter Comlach goes into Connaught and tells (this) to Patrick. "'Tis true," says Patrick: "those relics are not superfluous for him who shall come there; for, at the end of three score years from to-day, a son, of whom Erin and Alba will be full, will be born, and there will be his church, and (only) one in a hundred out of it will be in hell, and there will be thy own relics," says Patrick. "They will not be," says Comlach, "unless thy relics shall be there (also)." "My debroth," says Patrick, "I am willing if God is willing." Accordingly Patrick's relics are in the griandál of Clonmacnois, ut alii putant.

Ciarán son of Beoán, son of Olcán, son of Corc, son of Cuiniu, son of Cuinnid, son of Fiac, son of Mál, son of Carthach, son of Laisre, son of Lasriu, son of Altra (?), son of Glúinech, son of Corpse, son of Lug, son of Mid, son of Dub, son of Lugna, son of Feidlimid, son of Eochaid, son of Bresal Bán, son of Dega, son of Reo-soirche.

10. Findbarr, i.e. of Mag bile in Ulster. Findbarr i. Findén. What this verse says is that it was Findén of Mag Bile first brought the law of Moses into Ireland.⁵ Or it is to the Gospel that the name of 'law,' was given hic, for it is Findia that first brought the whole Gospel to Ireland. For it is Finnán of Mag Bile that brought Colmán's gospel to Ireland.

Now Sillán happened (to come) to Lethglenn, and Molaisse comes early in the morning round the graveyard. Sillán of the Hair happens to meet him. "This hair," says Molaisse, "shall not be killing every one," plucking it out perforce. Then Molaisse, after seeing the hair, dies at once, and hence Sillán dictus est (Sillán of the Hair).

of Adamnán, i.e. a diminutive of the name Adam. Adamnán son of Rónán, son of Tinne, and Rónnat the name of his mother. i.e. Adamnán son of Rónán, son of Tinne, son of Aed, son of Colum, son of Sétna, son of Fergus, son of Conall, son of Níall of the Nine Hostages. It came to pass that Adamnán was once travelling in Mag Breg with his mother on his back, and they saw two battalions smiting each other. It happened, moreover, that Rónait saw a woman, with an iron sickle in her hand, dragging another woman out of the opposite battalion, and the sickle was in her pap. For at that time women as well as men used to be delivering battle. Then Rónait said : "Thou shalt not carry me out of this place, until women are freed for ever from things of yon kind," i.e. from fighting and hosting. Then Adamnán promised that thing. There chanced to be a great convention in Ireland. So Adamnán with the pick of Ireland's clerics went (thither) and freed the women. Now these are the four laws of Erin : Patrick's law, not to kill the clerics ; and Adamnán's law, not to kill women : Dáire's law, not to kill kine ; and the law of Sunday, not to transgress at all (thereon).

Admirable was Adamnán. Great was his love of God and his neighbour. 'Tis by him that the great holy relics were collected in one shrine, and that is the shrine that Cilline Pontifex son of Dichloch brought to Ireland to make peace and compact between Tyrconnell and Tyrone. This is the number of the relics, as Adamnán sang.³

Patrick's day (March 17), Quiriacus' day (June 16), the day of Laissrénn with keenness (Sep. 16), the day of Beóc without decay (Dec. 16), they have the roof of every quarter of the year.

Little Christmas (Jan. 1), and Patrick's feast (March 17) Adamnán's feast (Sep. 23), Martin's feast (Nov. 11), Ciárán's feast (Sep. 9), Molaisse's feast (Aug. 12), I tell you without hurry (?), let them be remembered by you together on the same week-day.⁵

Columb's feast (June 9), the feast of bright Quiriacus (June 16), and the calends of September (Sep. 1), Bartholomew's feast (Aug. 25),⁶ say vigorously, Mary's nativity (Sep. 8), Michael's feast (Sep. 29), 'tis meet to reckon those feasts in every house on the same (week-) day.⁷

OCTOBER.

1. The triumph of Priscus, the passion of Lucas : the festival of German, a sun of songs : the feast of the holy noble relics in the front of October.

2. Eleutherius the martyr, thou veneratest his feast, at the same time on one line with the passion of Eusebius.

3. Mark's noble nativity in Egypt, the declaration of every mouth ! Candida, the happy sun ; the fair nativity of Colmán Ela.

4. Beseech Marcellus the bishop, with the vastness of his vigour, at the suffering of the virgin, the bright-limbed Balbina.

5. A fragment of the precious stone, with a host of marvelous martyrs, Sínech Fergnac's daughter, of Crúachu Maige

NOTES.

1. of Priscus i.e. a martyr.

of Luke, the evangelist.

of Germanus, i.e. a bishop and Patrick's tutor. of Germanus, bishop of the city Auxerre.

feast of the holy relics, i.e. when the relics of Peter and Paul with Mary's hair and of the great shrine which is in Rome came with Sechnall to Armagh. Or it is then that Maelruain's reliquary was completed. Or it is to the community of Tallaght that istae reliquiae were brought, and with them they are, ut dicunt alii. Some say that in Armagh are istae reliquiae, i.e. the shrine of Peter and Paul, and it is Sechnall that brought them hither.¹

2. onme, i.e. simul. Or Onme, i.e. the son of a king of Leinster, and he was given in hostageship to a king of Conn's Half (the northern half of Ireland), and the king gave him into Brigit's hand to secure his father's obedience to her. So one day Brigit's disciples (the nuns) said to her: "Delightful is this little hostage" (gillán). "This shall be his name," says Brigit, "Gillán." Onme was his name at first, and he is a saint in Cell Gillán in Leinster.²

3. of Mark the evangelist, etc. Candida, i.e. a virgin.

of Colman Ela, i.e. of Land Ela in Tír chell.

Caindech macu Dálan, i.e. son of Aed Álaind was he, and Achad bó is his principal church. Cainnech once went to Findén to ask for a place in which he might dwell. “I see none there,” says Findén, “for every one has taken before thee. “What is that empty place there?” asks Cainnech. “The demon of that road (?) is there,” says Findén, “proving the ecclesiastics.” “Let me go to him to expel him,” says Caindech.² “May it be easy for thee!” says Findén. When the demon beheld him coming towards him, he said this: “O bald, little cloak!” says he, “this is not thy path.” “Leave the place in which thou art at once,” says Caindech. Thereat the demon arose and left it, and thereafter Cainnech inhabits the place. “Before God, my dear brethren,” says Caindech to the folk who were along with him, “there was no limb of knowledge (?) there; neither my right hand nor my left came in contact with him,” etc.³

20. Fintan Maeldub of Daermag Húa Duach in Ossory. Now Maeldub was his proper name ; but he and Fintan of Clúain Eidnech in Leix made a union and each of them gave his name to the other in commemorationem societatis eius.

Maeldub : Maeldub, however, they say that he was of the Eoganacht of Cashel : or he is of the race of Brian son of Eochaid Muidmedón, i.e. Maeldub son of Amalgad, son of Fothad, son of Conall Glúne, son of Brian, son of Eochaid Muidmedon.

'Tis that Maeldub whom Féchín of Fore took with him as a fosterling and set him to study. His good work and his devotion increased so that Féchín made him cellarer for the congregation ; and of his race is the Muinter Maelduib. After his death Féchín said :

Maeldub, foe of the base dark devils,
save his cloak and his sheet of linen, he possessed nothing of the world.
The witness which Michael bore as to Maeldub, good was he for whom he gave it :

Since he entered noble religion he set not his ear to a pillow.

Michael's witness as to Maeldub—great the witness as to a son of man, save the King of the stars, Mary's Son, there is none better for praying to.

Though I should say 'my back is sore,' it would not be after carrying a heavy burden :
the crooked midge would not be weary (from the burden) of the evil or error which Maeldub wrought.

Et misit Finnén Talmach ad se illa nocte in formam Ríoc, et cognouit eam, et inde conceptus ac natus est Lonán Treote. Sed Drusticc estimauit quod Ríoc eam cognouit, et dixit quod Ríoc pater esset filii. Sed falsum est, quia Ríoc virgo fuit. Iratus est Mugint tunc, et misit quandam puerum in templum, et dixit ei: 'si quis prius in hác nocte ueniat ad te in templum percute eum secure.' Ideo dixit qui[a] prius Finnianus pergebat ad templum. Sed tamen illa nocte, Domino instigante, ipse Mugint prius ecclesie peruenit, et percussit eum puer, profeta dicente: Conuertetur dolor eius et in uerticem ipsius iniquitas eius descendet, et tunc dixit Mugint Parce. The scene of this tragedy was Futerna, now Whiterne in Galloway.

NOTES.

1. Lonán, Colmán, Cronán.

i. Lonán son of Talmach, from Treoit in Bregia. Or Lonán son of Telchan, from Clúain fota in Leix.

Lonán son of Talmach, and Drustic, daughter of the king of Britain, was his mother, and 'tis she that gave the love to Ríoc of Inis bó finde. So Talmach in his shape went in unto her, and she became pregnant by him, and by him Mugint was afterwards killed, ut dixit:

Talmach, a disciple without disgrace, was along with Findén, Lonán—festival without shame—was a son of his, and Drustic was his mother.

Drustic daughter of the king of Britain, though she was innocent, she was not timid, she was a virgin, full was her hardship, so that she gave love to Ríoc.¹

Colmán son of Dimma, of Tech mac nDimmai in Húi Cellaig Cúalann, and of Daire Dimma near Clúain eidnech. Or Colmán son of Findchad son of . . . , from Clúain Bruiches beside the Flesc, and 'tis he that at first was in Dún Fleisce.

Cronán, i.e. Cronán great-grandson of Conn, from Túaim Gréne in Thomond.

2. he bestowed a blessing, i.e. in Ferta fer Féicc, on the western side of Síd Truim, Patrick gave a blessing to Erc of Sláne in prima pascha etc. Bishop Erc,² of Sláne, then, a son of his was bishop of Ard Sratha.

Sláne i.e. in Bregia.

3. Hilary, i.e. a pope of Rome, i.e. a bishop and abbot of Poitiers, who composed (the hymn beginning) 'Hymnum dicat.'³

¹ The tale of Ríoc and Drustic is thus translated by Dr. Todd (Lib. Hymn. p. 97): "Findén of Magh Bile went to Mugint for instruction, and Rioc and Talmach and several others with him. Drust was King of Britain, and had a daughter, viz. Drustic was her name; and he gave her to Mugint to be taught to read; and she fell in love with Rioc, and she said to Findén: 'I will give thee all the books which Mugint has, that thou mayest transcribe them, if thou will give me Rioc in marriage.' And Finnen sent Talmach to her that night in the form of Rioc, and he knew her, and from thence was conceived and born Lonan of Treoit. But Drustic supposed that Rioc had known her, and she said that Rioc was the father of her son. But this was false, because Rioc was a virgin. Then Mugint was wroth, and sent a certain youth into the temple, and said to him: 'Whosoever comes first unto thee this night into the temple smite him with an axe.' He said this because Findén was in the habit of going first to the temple; but notwithstanding, on that night, by the providence of the Lord, Mugint himself went first to the church, and the youth smote him, as the prophet says: 'For his travail shall come [upon his own head], and his wickedness shall fall on his own pate' [Ps. vii. 17]. And then Mugint said Parce etc. ² See his pedigree LL. 349^b. ³ See Todd, Book of Hymns, 148 et seq. and Antiph. Bench.

12. to my Cummain, i.e. Cummíne,¹ son of Fiachna, a successor of Brénáinn of Cluain ferta, of the Eoganacht of Cashel was he.

The Cummíne² here mentioned was king of West Munster, and was a sage; and Fiachna begat him per ebrietatem on his own daughter. And he questioned the daughter: ‘By whom hast thou him?’ And the daughter said ‘By thee.’ And Fiachna said: ‘He must die’; ‘Be it so,’ says the girl. But when he was born he was brought to Cell Íte, and there he was left on the top of a cross in a little basket (cumín): hence he was called Cuimmín, and there he was nursed and taught, and no one knew whence he was until his mother came one day to visit him to the house of Íte’s successor. And Íte’s successor was not there when she came, and Cuimmín asked for a drink, and his mother gave him the Abbess’ bowl to drink from, and he drank it. Wherefore the abbess rebuked her for giving him the vessel, and then the mother said, ‘Notice not,’ etc., and the staves after it:³

¹ His pedigree LL. 351c. ² Thus in LL. 286^b, 42-51: Cummíne he Tall, son of Fiachna, of the Eoganacht of Cashel. On his own daughter Fiachna begot him through drunkenness: for the girl used to sleep with her mother. So her father made her confess to find out to whom the son was born, and she confessed that it was by him. He said that the child should be cast into the mouths of wild beasts, so that neither he nor his daughter should ever see it. Then the child was taken from her in a small vessel wherein milk used to be, and was left on the top of a cross in front of the church, with purple raiment [was this to mark the royal descent of the child, or to appease the gods? (purpura dis advocatur placandis, lin. N. II. ix. 60]—around it, and three score ounces of silver. ³ Thus LH.: Notice not though I give drink to my brother: | he is Fiachna’s son, he is Fiachna’s grandson, his mother is Fiachna’s daughter. ⁴ A different pedigree LL. 352b, where for cuile we have Maic culc.

21. A holy couple, i.e. two mighty saints, i.e. two chiefs.

Clement, i.e. a pope and bishop of Rome.

Son of Coman, of Aran. i.e. Colmán his name, i.e. from the eastern Aran. Or Áru and Ériu are the two hills side by side.

son of Congrad of Erin, i.e. Aedán son of Congrad is his name, and in Clúain eidnech is Aedán the pilgrim, son of Concrad. Or Aedán son of Jacob, ut alii dicunt. Aedán son of Congnad of Clúain eidnech or of Enach truim.

22. Caecilia, a virgin in Rome.¹

23. of Clement, i.e. Clement, i.e. bishop and abbot of Rome. There is a splendid convent of Clement's under the sea in which he was drowned, and every year, on Clement's feastday, the sea ebbs so that the convent is clear among waves, i.e. among the noises of the waves of the sea; and men go thither to fast; and a certain woman once forgetfully left her child there and it was whole at the end of a year (and came) to meet her² again through God's grace and Clement's, etc.

24. Cianán from Daimliac in Bregia.³ Thus is Cianán's body, without corrupting, without dissolving,⁴ in the tomb to the east of the damliac and the cause thereof is this: Cairnech of Tuilén once came to Damliac Cianáin, and they proceed to give him a bath. No domain, i.e. bottom, was found in the tub. “That is a shame,” says Cianán. “What?” asks Cairnech. “Not to have a bottom in the tub,” says Cianán. “Put the water into it,” says Cairnech, “and let the washing be done.” Water is poured into it, and not a drop went out. “Get thee into the tub, O Cairnech,” says Cianán. “Let us go together,” says Cairnech. They go. “Comely is the body, O cleric,” says Cairnech. “As it is (now) indeed,” says Cianán. “I beseech God,” then says Cairnech, “that it may abide as it is for ever without corrupting, without dissolving, until Christ shall come to the great assembly of Doom.” And that is fulfilled.

A high-bishop used to cut Cianán's hair and nails every Maundy Thursday in every year down to Adamnán's time. Now Adamnán went into the tomb to behold and touch the body. Forthwith his eye is struck out. So he fasts regarding it, and his eye is then restored to him. Thenceforward no one dares to enter the tomb.

Now Patrick copied Cianán's (transcript of the) canon,⁵ and Cianán copied Patrick's. For an interchange they did that; and Patrick asked this, for Cianán's writing was the better.

And the union of Colum cille and Cianán was made thus, i.e. Colum cille's hand (thrust) in through the southern side of the tomb even to the half, and Cianán's hand (thrust) out even to half the side, and then they make the union.

At the end of a great time after the killing of Níall of the Nine Hostages by Eochaid son of Éndae Cennselach,¹ and after Níall had gained a realm as far as the sea of Wight, Cairnech came with his monks to Ireland, and reached Tulach Maini; and Maine and his children knelt to him, and offered the hill to him and to the clerics, whence it is now called Tulach Maini; and Maine gave to that church his own manual service and the service of his children after him. However, Níall's body was afterwards taken out of the ground by Cairnech, and thou wouldest think that he had died that very hour, so that there was no lack of shape or form upon him, for it is a tub with healing herbs that was around him in his grave. Now a mass was said by the clerics over Níall's body, and at the (sprinkling of) holy water the herbs part from him.² The king's body was then re-buried in Tuilén by Cairnech, so that it was Tuilén's first corpse.

Colmán Duib Cuilinn, i.e. black Colmán from Cuilenn, i.e. a mountain which is at Belach Conglais in Leinster. Colmán of the ink (duib) of Cuilenn in the Renna, i.e. from Dún Rechet and from Belach Conglais in Leinster, and from other places. Comgall of Bangor went to the house of Colman duib Chuilinn's father, who had a barren wife. Then the cleric asks writing-ink of the barren wife. It is given (and she tastes it). Thereof Colmán is conceived. Hence he was called Colmán of the ink of Cuilenn.

Findchu from Brí gobann, i.e. in Fir Maige in Munster.

Now this was Findchu's⁴ custom: every corpse that was brought to the church, to lie with it the first night. And this was the guerdon he asked therefor, that the Devil should not vanquish any person who should beseech him at death, and that such person should not go to hell.

And this is the prison in which he sat, namely, a flagstone over his head and a sickle of iron in each of his armpits (by which he was suspended), so that his head would not touch the stone above nor his feet the floor (below). And Comgall of Bennchor chanced to visit him and said, "Come down," quoth he. Then said Findchú:

"This is the one prayer that I pray on my parting from the engine (of torture),

Comgall said: "That shalt thou have from God."

11. Damasus with my Senóc of (Belach) Mugnae, in the north, a broad plain; the feast of my Elteóc, a fair warrior, with a valiant host over the sea.

12. A tower of gold over every sea-plain: he will give a hand to (help) my soul, Findian the fair, a lovable root, of vast Clonard.

13. For the dear multitudinous day, may they come with many thousands, Baethan the pious of Clúain, Columb the abstinent of Tír (dá glais).

14. May he call us to the royal realm of the King whom our Sister²⁹ brought forth, the holy champion, vanquished, just,
 Drusus with his triad.

15. The calling of happy Faustinus, with the fair train of his temple, at the feast of Flann the modest ruler, the abiding successor at Bangor.

From one calends to the other we have given our search.
O Jesus with true goodness, thou possessest thy year !

The troop of every single day we have heretofore(?) measured it out. We cut off the excess, our end²⁰ against the head of January.²¹

Weak was our power in a poor body that is lowliest ; but what is noblest has strengthened (?) us, the high love of Jesu's cohort.

Patriarchs, prophets, though they were servants of Christ's, unto people in plenty, their feasts are unknown.

But it is known that, save on one of these festivals, not a soul from this enduring world has reached the high heaven of this King.

Christ, dear beyond affection, by his pure blessing, with his heart's desire !

O Christ, let me be preserved below, above, from every reproach, at my earnest prayer with sinlessness, for sake of Thy champions !

The race that we have run is for love (?) of Christ's Kingdom ; because we have searched books, it contains much of profit.

It is profit to the ignorant to whom it will be a corslet of piety : every group sings it to ascertain the feasts.

Though they that study it be sages, whose wisdoms are wide, there are therein many delightful assonances, which sharpen its melodies (points?).

Heaven's King with angels, whose fame we will not hide,
every martyr whom we tell of,
came to compose it.

It is not (earthly) science has composed the pious lucid booklet, but the angelic aid of the King, Jesukin fair (and) lustrous.

A fair synod came to me in the mid-court of my house, to correct it before you, according to the rule of the King of heaven.

It is not (earthly) wisdom that has prepared it : 'tis a sin of ours if we assert it ; (but) every dear saint with purity has wrought his chapter.

The order of the chapters, if there be anyone who disturbs it, I declare it before this number, it is a destructive slaughter of this host.

The host has corrected it, the pious booklet : by their departure with perfection they have determined their feasts.

I have searched out martyrologies afar and anear ; with desire I have wrought : to the saints I have given.

They have bestowed their blessing on every one who shall sing it : they will come to attend him at the time he shall die.

With the life of his soul in the realm of the bright sun, on the hills of the seven heavens, having been born past torments.

(There was) neither forgetfulness nor neglect as regards every one who has not been recounted ; but abridgment of speech under science to be harmonized (?).

Though there were seven tongues in my sage, studious mouth, it is until Doom—greater than any noise—if I should recount them.

Neither verbose nor prolonged²⁰ is the pious booklet, but a commemoration of virginal saints with science and smoothness.

Though smooth is our booklet, with strength (?) of songs, neither wooing nor vainglory has brought forth many tomes.

The vast tome of Ambrose, the Sensus of pious Hilary, the Antigraph of Jerome, the Martyrology of Eusebius.

Ireland's host of books, whose troop is wise, we have searched multitudes of them, the martyrologies of the men of the Gaels.

I testify without blushing, though thou shouldst repair to their graves, thou wouldst not find with folks a martyrology that would be more correct.

'Tis a city of protection, to sing it without weakness : 'tis a strong rampart without slowness against men, against devils.

Unto God it is a vehement prayer, against the Devil it is a vast strength : 'tis a psalm that declares great might : 'tis a truly accurate martyrology.

Everyone whose music shall be this noble continuous song, into the eternal realm of this King, this host will convoy them.

The excellent host of this King, along with whom is my fight, that this cry will be a conflict (with the Devil) I am surety on their behalf.

I am surety for the grace of him who shall sing it every day. I testify without lies that he will be in the eternal Kingdom.

With the life of his soul by Christ the loveable, mighty Prince: if he were acquainted with sorrow his being saved is not hard.

If he who sings it in tears (and) with purity is sinless, many wondrous miracles will be wrought for him.

'Tis a commutation of seven masses if he who recites it is holy: 'tis a commutation of the three fifties (the psalms) to the freeman who shall sing it.

[Tis a splendid commutation of a festival, all these feasts, 'tis a hallowing of his soul, 'tis an abating of his desire.]

Wondrous are all the miracles which we declare : a blessing

Provided this be what he pray to the Lord with beauty, the beasts of the mould will not prove him, his relics will not decay.

His soul without striving, into him, when he has attained it, the dew of his grave will heal.

At the commemoration of their feasts may the work of their prayer protect us : no

after reckoning their feasts, I will number their troops.

The troop of the noble saints of Erin, with Patrick who is highest: Columb cille, who sets up with the troops of the saints of Alba.

The final, vast troop, which ends a bright chain, Saint Brigit after triumphs, with the virgins of Erin.

All these troops with noble overkings, to help me, a bright white following, the vast host of saints.

Every saint who has been,
is (and) shall be up to Doom—a mighty division!—in company of holy Christ, may they be helping me!

May they be helping me in heaven and on earth; may they come in bands to work with my soul!

My soul, my wounded body,
while they shall be at labour, may they be consoling me, the kingfolk I have entreated!

I have entreated the king-folk for whom there has been search: O Jesus with true goodness I entreat thee afterwards.

After recounting these troops, O Overking not to be hidden, O Christ, whose servant I am, miserere mihi.

Miserere mihi, O royal Prince, abundantly, O Jesus, I love Thee, O great God, I beseech thee!

O great God, I entreat Thee, hear my wretched sigh! may I be after this battle in the everlasting company of this host!

The great host which I reckon, which died in every nation, to Thee, O Christ who art noblest, I appeal by its sufferings.

I appeal by their truly innocent bloods on roads: I appeal by their limbs, their lances through their sides.

I appeal with thy saints, to Thee by all that I say, that I may have in Thy kingdom everything for which I contend.

At every battle on which my proud elated mind has fallen, at the smiting of my mindful body, may thy household pray to Thee !

Hear, O train of heaven, every one of you who listens to me ; not to be in your company is what disquiets me greatly.

Much sorrow disquiets me here, below star-beautiful heaven : since your companionship is good, grievous to me is your absence.

Ye are able to help me, for great is your tenderness : heal my heart for sake of Mary's Son.

Great is the strait wherein I am, in a poor body slender, skinny : great are my crimes : ye are able to help me.

If ye have charity with its due attribute (?), here you would have in lowliness a poor wretch to whom it should be shown.

If ye be able to feel compassion, timely were your coming: here is one who is loneliest, a weakling of Jesu's folk.

Though you have no danger before this King of Clouds, yet I am a wretched weakling without help (to dry) my tears.

O holy troop of the seven heavens, since great is your tenderness, heal my heart for sake of Mary's Son.

For sake of this King, to whom this cry is made, help him out of this sadness, this wretched mendicant !

Though all these prayers seem wretched to the brethren, to Thee, O Christ, at this time, I have prayed my prayer.

Another prayer I pray on behalf of the men of the world, O Lord of the realm, O King that givest dooms.

Mayst Thou save me, O Jesus, my soul from every punishment, as Thou savedst Martin from the priest of the idol.

Mayst Thou save me, O Jesus, for sake of Thy household, as Thòu savedst Patrick from death by poison in Tara.

Mayst Thou save me, O Jesus, for I am a servant of Thine, as Thou savedst Cóemgein from the falling of the mountain.

Mayst Thou save me, O Jesus, everlasting are Thy miracles! O Lord whom I entreat, I expect Thy messengers.

When the great boon may come to me, whether at Easter or in Lent, may the kingfolk I have commemorated convoy me into paradise!

I have commemorated the the kingfolk around the King above the clouds, etc.

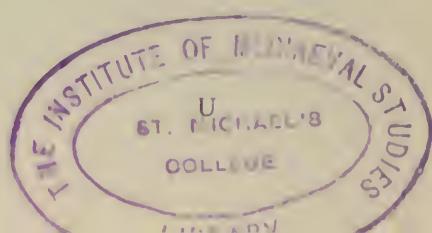

IT ENDETH. Amen.

'A young cleric of the community of Ferns, a fosterling of Brigit's, comes to her with dainties. He was with her in the refectory consuming his ration. Once upon a time then, after going to communion, Brigit strikes a clapper. "Well, thou young cleric there, hast thou a soulfriend?" "I have, indeed," says the young cleric. "Let us sing his requiem." "Why so?" asks the young cleric. "He has died" (says Brigit). "When thou hadst finished half thy ration I saw that he was dead." "How knewest thou that?" "Easy to say: from the time that thy soulfriend was dead I saw that thy ration was put into thy trunk, thou being quite headless. Go forth: eat nothing till thou gettest a soulfriend, for a man without a soulfriend is a body without a head: for it is 'water of a limy lough'—i.e. neither good for drinking nor for washing—that is like a man without a soulfriend.'

- P. 66, ll. 26, 27. Hence we may infer: 1, that the Old-Irish altars were of wood, not stone, and 2, that they had only one leg, like that of Auriol in the Bouches du Rhône, of which there is a drawing in the Dicty. of Christian Antiquities, i. 63.

l. 32, frith aingeni should probably be emended to sofrith ingen.

- 86, l. 30, dia ndern should probably be emended to dia ndernad 'of whom was begotten.'

- 87, l. 27, according to the Codex Salmanticensis, col. 814, Carthach's fornication was miraculously prevented: Carthacus, sancti Kerani discipulus, gravi temptatione pulsatus, quandam de virginibus sancte Lidanie adamavit, atque ad locum sceleris perpetrandi pari voto cum ea convenit. Hoc spiritu Dei revelante sanctus pontifex didicit, et ad iracundiam concitatus, quia provocaverunt eum filius et filia. Sed qui in temptatione facit proventum afficit, atque flam-mam ignis desuper mittens, ab invicem separavit. Que virginem irrecuperabili cecitate percussit, ac domum reversa penetentiam egit. Juvenis vero, dolore cordis tactus, suam viro Dei humiliter confessus est culpam, qui ei pro penetentia injunxit peregre proficiisci.

 112 (at Ap. 5). Professor Bury, not seeing that ad-r-anniad ‘was kindled’ is here, as often, used metaphorically for ‘was begun,’ supposes that the quatrain ‘obviously’ refers to the Slane legend of the Easter fire. The poet’s meaning is that Ap. 5 is the feastday of the first person whom Patrick baptized in Ireland, i.e. Beccán mac Cúla.

 ‘Máel-Bresail son of Fland Léna was a-ravaging. And one of his ravages was the outraging of Húa Suanaig’s Cross and of his safe-conduct in Fid Ela of the retinue of the artists. Hence is (the name) ‘The Cross of the Satirists.’ In the lordship of Domnall son of Murchad was that outrage. Domnall son of Murchad Húa Caileán arrested all (the wrongdoers). And he was unable to award judgment and mulct because of the greatness of the outrage. So it was cast upon the conscience of Hua

Suanaig himself. This is Húa Suanaig's judgment: to wit, the land of the murder, namely, Ross Corr, to fall in ownership to S. Mochutu and to Húa Suanaig, and the persons that committed the murders—i.e., the Húi Gilli Suanaig, the Húi Cernaig and the Húi Conín—to be without return to their sept until the conflagration of Doomsday.'

Note 2, add According to Mr. Plummer, "the story of Buite and Maelcaich is found in the Latin Life of Buite, Rawl. B. 505, fo. 154. After miraculously crossing the Boyne, Buite raised from the dead a man who had been decapitated (f. 155 a 2). This was Maelcaich, whom he made gardener to the monastery. But Maelcaich broke his vow, and so his head dropt off again!" (f. 156 a 2.)

P. 136, l. 20 (at May 25). Perhaps the Johannes here mentioned is John the Baptist, the third finding of whose head is sometimes commemorated on May 25.

'Seven Christians¹ went into a cave to avoid their persecution. The cave was closed upon them, for no one knew that they had entered it. They were in the cave, asleep, to the end of 150 years, till Christian kings came on the world, and men proceeded to protect a city. They went to the cave in which the sleepers were and took its stones to make thereof a defence. Then after the seven had risen out of sleep, as seemed to them, one of them went to buy food. He produced his money in the city. "Get out, O man," say the citizens, "tis old money that thou hast ; it will not be accepted from thee. There are 150 years since that money served, and it is a Christian king that is there [i.e. on the current coin] to-day," namely, Constantine, son of Helena. So then he knew his fate, and he rendered thanks to God and told all his true tales, and his comrades were taken out of the cave, and afterwards the king was brought to hold speech with them, and they told him their true tidings ; and the Christians, and the name of God, were magnified because of that miracle.'
